Palestine Vote Put Off; Arabs Seek Federation

Assembly Adjourns 24 Hours in Last Attempt to Reconcile Holy Land Factions

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Flushing Meadows, N. Y., Nov. 28.—A compromise plan for a single, federalized state is being desperately studied tonight by Moslem delegates who have 24 hours' grace before a showdown vote on partition of Palestine.

The United Nations General Assembly voted 25 to 15 to adjourn until 4 p. m. tomorrow on the plea of Alexandre Parodi of France that one last effort be made at reconciliation between Arabs and Jews.

Parodi, himself in a desperate situation because of France's Arab colonies in North Africa, appeared to be grasping at any straw to try reconciliation.

He pointed to a speech by Fadhil Jamali, foreign minister of Iraq, which declared that "the main function of the United Nations, which is reconciliation and adjustment of human problems, was hardly attempted." This, Parodi said, was a hopeful indication for compromise.

Before Parodi made his proposal, Dr. Oswaldo Aranha of Brazil, president of the Assembly, had predicted to reporters that partition would be approved 31 votes to 15.

Herschel V. Johnson of the United States also declared it would pass with one or two votes to spare.

Philippines Switch

Among the newest converts to partition tonight was the Philippines. The Washington Post learned that Tomas Confesor, who replaced Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo as delegate, had received instruction from the Philippine Embassy in Washington to vote for the American-Soviet plan of separate Jewish and Arab states.

Romulo had indicated previously he would vote "No."

Confesor was involved, however, in differences with Judge Jose D. Ingles, alternate delegate, who was instructed to vote against the plan by the general before he sailed for Geneva on Wednesday.

Moslems Call Caucus

The Moslem states called a caucus tonight at the Waldorf-Astoria in one last, and probably futile effort to forestall partition.

Camille Chamoun, Lebanon Minister of Interior, said the plan to be discussed was offered by a minority group of the United Nations Commission which recommended partition.

It involves divisions of local government similar to that existing in the United States, or a cantonal form of government existing in Switzerland. In either case local inhabitants elect their own local government. Thus, the Arabs hope the Jews will be content with controlling their own areas, but still

Freakish Storm Sinks 20 Small Boats Off Florida

Miami, Fla., Nov. 28 (AP).—A freakish storm born in a squall sank about 20 small boats, damaged several others and uprooted trees in Key West today and caused northeast storm warnings to be hoisted from Palm Beach to Key West.

The Boca Chica naval air station, where President Truman will land next Wednesday aboard his plane, the Sacred Cow, reported wind gusts up to 86 miles an hour. Key West proper had a sustained wind velocity of 65 miles an hour with heavier gusts.

A Navy hurricane hunting plane flown by Ensign W. R. Creel probed the area but found no center in the squall wave. Navy aerologists aboard the plane reported strong squalls and considerable turbulence but added, "It is not a tropical storm."

Miami and Palm Beach expected rain squalls with winds up to 50 miles an hour during the night.

House Group Investigates Army Buying

Officer 'Enrichment' In War Sifted by Bender Committee

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Investigation of the activities of several wartime procurement officers will be conducted by a House committee, it was disclosed yesterday.

Chairman Bender (R., Ohio) of a subcommittee of the House Expenditures Committee said "three or four cases of unreasonable enrichment" had been uncovered, and indicated officers involved would be called on to explain their relations with contractors. He said he had no intention of competing with the Senate War Investigating Committee, which recently uncovered business sidelines of Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers, Air Force purchasing officer.

Bender said his committee was "not out hunting headlines" but predicted the results of his inquiry would compare favorably with those of the Senate body which questioned Meyers.

Meyers, who had been retired with a tax-free pension of $550 a month, has since been shorn both of his pension, and numerous honors for his services.

In that connection, President Truman has asked the armed services for a list of all their officers receiving tax-free disability retirement pay. Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said he did not know what ultimate use would be made of the list, but that Mr. Truman wanted it now "for his information only."

Bender's committee has been at work for sime time on a report from the General Accounting Office which showed some Army and Navy procurement officers had been hired since the war by manufacturers with whom they did business for the Government. Investigators have been examinig accounts of some contractors listed as having been greatly overpaid. Bender said, and added that his committee would seek to learn if any officers profited by these contracts.

The committee will open its inquiry Monday behind closed doors. When it begins public hearings on a GAO audit of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, some of the airplane contracts will be examined, Bender said.

In addition to losing his disability pension and his medals, Meyers faces a threat of prosecution in civil and military courts. A District grand jury has begun consideration of criminal charges against Meyers and grand juries in other States may be asked to look into the case.

Freedom Train Is Inspected By President

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

President Truman and thousands of other Greater Washington residents inspected the Freedom Train in Union Station yesterday.

They came from all walks of life—and included some too young to walk and others almost too crippled to walk.

They were a cross section of America, and from President to school child they had a common purpose—to see the documents that crystalize the American heritage of freedom and independence.

Thanksgiving Day 10,471 persons visited the train, and attendance yesterday, the train's final day in Washington, totaled 7479.

President Truman and his party of Cabinet members drove to the station following an hour-long Cabinet meeting at the White House yesterday morning.

Following his 30-minute tour of inspection, the President said:

"I have just been aboard the Freedom Train inspecting the wonderful documents out of which the Government of the United States was founded.

"I sincerely wish that every person in this country, and in every other country, for that matter, could see those documents and appreciate just what they stand for—freedom of the individual and liberty to live as that individual sees fit, as long as he lives in harmony with his neighbors.

"That's all this Government stands for, that is what we are fighting for now—for world peace."

As the President entered the station the waiting crowds applauded and the Navy Band played "Hail to the Chief."

Before boarding the train he shook hands with the Washington committee headed by Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson who, in a speech following the President's, urged that the United States remain strong to enforce its international commitments.

Aboard the train the President paused for a long look at the original draft of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address and Thomas Jefferson's first draft of the Declaration of Independence.

These were also popular exhibits with the two-day crowd of visitors, together with the last message sent from Corregidor, be-

Three Police Captains Sent To New Posts

Kuehling, Lutz, Storm Change Precincts; Shifts Unexplained

A three-way shift of police captains which will install new commanders in the Fourth, Tenth and Twelfth Precincts was announced yesterday by Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police.

The transfers, effective Monday, will send:

Capt. Benjamin C. Kuehling from the Fourth to the Twelfth Precinct.

Capt. Clarence H. Lutz from the Tenth to the Fouth Precinct.

Capt. Walter T. Storm from the Twelfth to the Tenth Precinct.

It was also announced that Capt. Robert C. Pierce of the First Precinct will serve as night supervisor from midnight to 8 a. m. at police headquarters during the month of December, relieving Capt. Clyde N. Strange, who will return to his command at the Second Precinct.

No Comment from Barrett

Lieut. Earl P. Hartman, who was in charge of the Second Precinct during the absence of Captain Strange, will be sent to the First Precinct to take temporary command there.

The Fourth is the most active of the three precincts involved in the Kuehling-Lutz-Storm transfers because of the greater number of crimes committed there. Its new commander, Captain Lutz, is a college graduate and proud of his reputation of being one of Washington's "toughest cops."

Major Barrett refused to comment on the transfers or to say whether they had been influenced by the disclosure last September of shortages and irregularities in funds handled at the Fourth Precinct.

The irregularities were uncovered shortly after Pvt. Oscar L. Fisher, day station clerk at the precinct station who handled the

Italian Generals Refuse Rome Order To Take Control Of Industrial City

By Giuliano Ferrieri

Milan, Italy (Saturday), Nov. 29 (U.P.).—Combined leftwing groups led by wartime partisans seized control of the prefecture—the federal building—yesterday in bold defiance of the central government and remained in possession, surrounded by police, through the night.

The Leftists also seized the government-operated Milan radio, and called a 12-hour general strike at noon.

Ten thousand men led by partisan battalions marched on the prefecture yesterday morning, past police who did not molest them, and took charge.

The interior department at Rome ordered the army to take full control of Italy's No. 2 city and greatest industrial area.

Army generals declined politely to act, however, on the ground that there was an almost total lack of disorder, and said the police would tidy up the situation this morning.

500 Remain in Area

yard and their leaders manned "general headquarters" inside.

Partisans manning barbed wire barricades mingled with police at barricades of their own surrounding the building.

Troops moved in quietly and took places along with police.

The army hoped that the Leftists would get tired and go home this morning, or that police could oust them without a fight.

The entire situation was due to the sudden dismissal Thursday night of Prefect Ettore Troilo, a leftist but not a Communist and the only prefect who was a wartime partisan.

Confer on Action

Until late in the night ministry of interior officials were in conference in Rome with army, carabiniere and police officials discussing, it was announced.

It was evident as the hours passed that they were preparing for a possible showdown.

By 10:30 p. m. police patrols were manning every big street intersection. All cars were checked. Strategic points were heavily guarded. Light police tanks

Ministers Make No Progress

Bevin Warns Molotov to Agree On Germany or West May Act

London, Nov. 28 (AP).—British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin warned Russia tonight that the Western powers possibly would act on their own to save Germany and Europe from "chaos" if the Big Four failed to agree on Germany's future.

The warning came during a session of the Foreign Ministers Conference marked mainly by confusion and disagreements, informants said. Bevin, the sources added, looked straight at impassive Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov and asked:

"Are we going to leave Europe in chaos? Is chaos our objective? If it is, we had better know now. If a settlement is to be blocked every time we try, I say we cannot go on forever with chaos in Europe as it is now."

Bevin asked the questions after Molotov blocked agreement on setting up a border commission to examine territorial claims on Germany and a proposal to allow economic integration of the Saar with France.

Molotov then charged that even before the conference started Britain had a plan to set up a western German government. He then asked that the four powers condemn the setting up of any "segment" German government in place of the central administration desired by the Soviet Union.

Bevin denied Molotov's charge but added:

"While the British government has come to no conclusion and indeed has even refused to come to a conclusion or even to assume this conference will break down, I am not in a position to commit people as to what might have to be done in the event of Big Four failure to agree.

"If in the end peace is denied, then surely you cannot at this stage ask us to stand still with Europe in chaos and not do anything at all."

The exchange on the creation of a German government in the occupation zones of the Western powers came, the informants said, as Molotov hammered on his familiar theme "that the Western powers want a partitioned Germany."

Secretary of State George C. Marshall said the record of the United States was clear on the subject of German unity. He pointed out the Soviet Union had been asked repeatedly to join its zone

Premier Fires 66 Heads of Police, Calls 80,000 Men Back Into Army

Paris (Saturday), Nov. 29 (AP). Premier Robert Schuman's Cabinet summoned Parliament to meet this morning to act upon its demands for extraordinary powers to cope with spreading strikes.

The cabinet held a three-hour emergency meeting last night after the Premier had fired 66 police commissioners and called 80,000 troops back to the Army in the midst of a strike of two million to four million men in 20 national unions, including railwaymen.

The demands the Cabinet agreed on were understood to include authorization to (1) mobilize certain public service workers; (2) take stern measures against sabotage, particularly of railroads, post offices, communications and electric light plants, and (3) deal strictly with civil servants and employes of the nationalized railroads judged guilty of breaking discipline.

May Ask Strike Limit

There was a possibility also, a parliamentary source said, that the National Assembly might be asked to limit the right to strike.

The cabinet also decided to meet to vote on proposals for reclassification of civil servants—a measure that would in many cases result in pay rises intended to satisfy strikers' demands.

Minister of Commerce and Industry Robert LaCoste, in a radio broadcast, asked coal miners to return to work. He cited critical needs for fuel for homes and industries.

The government's recall of half of the 1946 class of conscripts, just a week after half the 1947 class was remobilized, was decided upon at a cabinet meeting yesterday morning with President Vincent Auriol. The equivalent of 15 divisions thus had been called in to strengthen the army.

Reds Call It 'Purge'

The firing of the 66 police commissioners, each in charge of a district corresponding to an American precinct, was called a "purge" by the Communist newspaper L'Humanite. It was reported the step was taken because Schuman feared Communists might get control of the police force as they did in some Balkan countries. The 66 had been members of the wartime "resistance" who were appointed after the liberation.

An informant said Schuman already had decided not to attempt to mobilize striking dock workers because they were too-solidly Communist.

He was reported seriously considering mobilizing the railroad workers, however, because opposition to the strike already had become strong within the railway union ranks.

The national strike committee directing operations of the 20 unions, on which there are no representatives of the anti-Communist minority of the General Confederation, issued a commu-

Iowa Imports Corn While Prices Climb

Seasonal Records Set by Grains, Most Other Commodities

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The terrific damage caused by unfavorable weather to the Nation's corn crop last summer was graphically demonstrated yesterday, when Chicago grain dealers reported that Iowa, the Great Corn State, was importing corn to meet feeding requirements.

The news came as the prices of nearly all commodities were soaring to new highs.

Wheat again set a new 30-year record of $3.20¼ for December contracts—less than a nickel under the all-time high of $3.25 set May 11, 1917.

December oats set a record for any oats future at $1.27⅛. Cash oats also set a new all-time record of $1.37 a bushel. Cash corn brought $2.66¼, only 4¼ cents under its all-time record.

Wheat closed 5¾ to 7¼ cents higher. Corn was 7 to 7¾ higher. Oats were 13.4 to 2⅝ higher.

Lard and soybeans set new seasonal highs. In New York cotton futures advanced into new highs for this time of year. Prices were $1 to $1.95 a bale (500 pounds) above the Wednesday close, with December reaching 38.81 cents a pound.

Hogs, cattle and sheep were higher at Chicago stockyards, and eggs and butter futures advanced on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Pittsburgh reported a boost in retail prices of coal of 65 cents a ton. The United States Rubber Co. raised prices for passenger car tires 6 to 8 per cent, truck tires 5 to 7 per cent, and tractor tires 5 to 7½ per cent.

The Sun Oil Co. at Philadelphia announced it was raising its price for crude oil 50 cents a barrel. The action, Vice President John C. Pew said, was "to meet the needs of its customers" and "to do its part in supplying the constantly expanding needs of the armed services for petroleum products."

Taft Indorses Stopgap Bill, Hits Methods

U. S. 'Miscalculations' In Foreign Policy Blamed for Situation

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senator Robert A. Taft R., Ohio) yesterday indorsed the 597-million-dollar stopgap relief bill but bitterly attacked the Administration's basic "approach" to the whole problem of foreign aid.

In a speech renouncing opposition to the interim measure, the Senate GOP steering chief blamed Administration foreign policy "miscalculations" and "socialization" abroad for western Europe's plight.

Taft spoke as the Senate amended the interim bill in three minor respects but delayed final passage until Monday.

Assures Approval

His withdrawal from the stopgap fracas presaged overwhelming Senate approval of the pending bill, but probably a stiff fight to come on long-range recovery methods and amounts.

Taft accused the Administration in its long-range approach of attempting to underwrite the economy of western Europe instead of saying to recipient governments:

"Operate your own economy . . . If you find there are certain things you need, and of which we have a surplus . . . ask for them and we will give you credit to purchase those particular commodities."

Taft said he indorsed interim aid, without quibbling over the amount, because "I believe this bill is important and is important at the present time."

Backs Main Principles

He said he is for it because of its two main purposes (1 to relieve human suffering in France, Italy and Austria and (2) to discourage spread of communism in these countries.

"I believe that we should help Europe," he said, "but I feel that the approach which is made in this particular bill and so far as I know in the general long-time bill is the wrong approach, the wrong method of economy.

"It does not make so much differ-

Britons to Get 10c More Meat For Christmas

London, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—The British government today announced its Christmas present to the ration-starved people—permission to buy an extra dime's worth of meat, 4 ounces of candy and a pound of sugar during the holidays.

Food Minister John Strachey said that adults would be permitted to buy sixpence (10 cents) worth of meat in addition to the usual ration of 1 shilling's (20 cents') worth during the week beginning December 31.

Children's meat rations in the same period will be increased threepence (5 cents).

The candy ration will be increased from 1 pound to 1 pound 4 ounces during the four weeks from December 7 to January 3.

The sugar ration for the same four-week period will be raised from 2 to 3 pounds, and continued at 2½ pounds for the month beginning January 4.

Two Disputes Unresolved

Labor Trouble Comes Home To Roost in NLRB's Own Lap

GSI Declares Union Refused Request for Anti-Red Affidavits

Union officials negotiating a new labor contract with Government Services, Inc., yesterday "refused to consider or discuss" a proposal that the union file non-Communist affidavits under the Taft-Hartley Act, GSI said.

Representatives of the United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers, Local 471, an affiliate of the United Public Workers of America (CIO), declined to make immediate comment.

Negotiations opened yesterday morning at GSI offices, 1135 21st st. nw. The union's representatives, it was learned, had asked for a flat 15-cent hourly increase for some 1700 employes of GSI, which operates cafeterias and snack bars in Federal buildings here.

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, GSI president, proposed in response that officers of both UCRW and the parent UPWA file non-Communist affidavits with the National Labor Relations Board. Grant also requested that the unions file financial statements under the act. He said both matters should be disposed of first before other proposals are negotiated.

A GSI statement following the three-hour session queried: "If the union refuses to discuss the corporation's proposal at such meetings,

Denham's Practices On Hiring Bring Rift With Union

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The National Labor Relations Board, set up to deal with troubled labor relations, has some troubled labor relations to deal with—its own.

They stem from a sharp and as yet unresolved dispute between the NLRB Employes Union, an independent organization, and Robert N. Denham, the new general counsel of the agency.

The disagreement, it was learned yesterday, was tossed into the reluctant lap of the full board, along with a series of allegations accusing Denham of unilateral decisions regarding employment.

Denham's methods, the union charged, are the sort which, if committed by a private employer, would be characterized by the board as illegal, unfair labor prices.

Denham called his employment practices just and declared that he acted to obtain the best person for the job.

The principal items of the dispute are the union's request and Denham's refusal:

1. To post notices of all job vacancies, inviting applications from NLRB employes who seek better positions.

2. To hear grievances of disap-

Veteran With Hand Missing Won't Sign Loyalty Statement

By Murrey Marder

"What is loyalty to your Government"

A 22-year-old veteran who lost his left hand in combat asked that question yesterday after disclosing he has refused to sign a loyalty questionnaire at Veterans' Administration headquarters here.

The ex-GI's refusal to submit a loyalty statement is the first publicly known case of its kind here involving a regular Federal employe.

A VA spokesman yesterday said no action has as yet been taken in the case, which is "still under study," although the employe was "advised he could resign or be discharged" if he failed to sign the questionnaire.

"It's not easy for me to describe why I don't want t osign," declared lanky, bespectacled Walter E. Davis, twice wounded in action in the European theater.

"I guess it is mostly general principles," said Davis, who is employed in the actuarial division of VA's insurance department, and lives in an F st. rooming house.

"I didn't fight for that kind of Government which tells you 'sign this—or else.' That's what I thought we were fighting to prevent. I fought for some rights—I think those rights have been stepped on . . .

Led Epic Trek Across Desert

French Hero General LeClerc Killed in Sahara Plane Crash

Paris, Nov. 28 (AP).—General LeClerc, the hero of the march from Lake Chad and the man who led French troops back into Paris, has been killed in an airplane crash in Africa, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

Gen. Leclerc

The 46-year-old expert in armored warfare died in the Sahara Desert, where he first gained fame in World War II. Air Secretary Andre Maroselli said the accident occurred 20 miles from Colomb-Bechar near the Algeria-Morocco border. It was understood that all the 52 persons aboard the plane were burned to death. Just when the crash occurred was not announced.

LeClerc, inspector general of all French North African forces, emerged from the war as one of France's greatest heroes.

A member of an old and aristocratic family, the general assumed the neme LeClerc during the war to shield his wife and six children in German-occupied France from reprisals. His real name was Count Philippe de Mauteclocque.

The slight LeClerc led a Free French force on an epic march of almost 2000 miles from Fort Lamy in the Lake Chad region of French Equatorial Africa to Tripoli and a junction on January 23, 1943 with Field Marshal Lord Montgomery's British Eighth Army.

ence in connection with this bill . . .

"(But) it seems to me that the whole idea that we are to make good the deficit in the export-import balance of every country in the world is a completely fallacious idea and one which will completely wreck the United States if we go through with it."

Changes Approved

The Senate, meeting only 2½ hours under an agreement not to pass the bill before Monday, meanwhile approved these three changes without roll call votes:

By Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho), banning use of any stopgap funds "for the purchase of arms, armaments or munitions of war."

By Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), permitting representatives of this Government, including members of House and Senate Foreign and Appropriating Committees, to "observe and report" on relief distribution.

By Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.), specifying that Congress shall have the deciding voice, so far as this Government is concerned, in disposing of any left-over funds put in trust by foreign governments to pay for relief goods.

There was no controversy over any of these. Regarding the Taylor amendment banning arms purchases with relief funds, Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) simply said that nothing in the legislation "remotely contemplates" arms purchases of any kind.

Democrats Protest Delays

A vote on a fourth series of amendments by Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.) went over until Monday. Vandenberg indicated opposition to Kem's lead-off amendment, which requires each relief item to be labeled a "gift," carrying a statement that the United States will receive no repayment.

In the House meanwhile:

1. Three Southern Democrats, Pete Jarman (Ala.), Eugene Cox (Ga.) and Hale Boggs (La.), protested delays in moving aid legislation to the House. Jarman spoke of "turmoil" in France and said the House Foreign Affairs Committee has been "unfair" to the House, the President and the State Department in not acting with more speed.

2. Representative A. S. (Mike) Monroney (R., Okla.) told the Oklahoma congressional delegation that if interim relief and long-range recovery measures are successful "communism will be rolled back to the satellite states and possibly even to Russia itself." If that happens, he said, Russia "will start to talk a different policy in the United Nations and . . . we could have peace for 100 years."

Monday Is Due Date

Former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, chairman of the Executive Committee for the Marshall Plan To Aid European Recovery, expressed "profound concern" over delays in telegrams to leaders.

Next Monday is the legislative "deadline" Secretary of State George C. Marshall recently set for interim aid to France.

In disclosing for the first time that he will vote for the interim aid bill, Taft charged Europe's economic and political plight as "due almost entirely to the policies pursued by the United States and the present Administration."

Hits 'Yielding' Policy

"The policy adopted at Tehran and Yalta of yielding to the Russian demands for the method in which the war should be conducted, in yielding to the Russian demands that they be permitted to occupy that part of Germany containing Berlin and that part of Austria containing Vienna, enabled them to establish themselves as a tremendous power in eastern Europe, able to interfere with and prevent the cure of the economic conditions in western Europe," Taft said.

"Towards the end of the war and for some time afterwards we apparently did everything that Russia wished under the impression that if we were kind enough to them they would turn around and act in an angelic manner toward us and in an angelic manner towards Europe.

"That certainly was a complete miscalculation which is largely responsible for the tremendous power which Russia is abusing."

Two Reasons for Chaos

Taft charged there are two other reasons for economic chaos in Europe: (1) The Morgenthau plan "which was practically adopted at Potsdam and has been carried out in Europe ever since," and (2) the actual conduct of affairs by European countries themselves.

The Ohioan said the Morgenthau plan was designed to reduce Germany to an agricultural status, adding: "We have said repeatedly that we have abandoned the plan but no one knows whether we have abandoned it or not . . . Even today we are going through with that particular part of the plan which requires dismantling of factories in Germany, which will still further reduce the productive ability of Germany."

In commenting that European countries themselves are largely to blame, Taft told the Senate: "It is due to the fact that they have adopted the principles of socialism. They have not conducted their governments in a manner which would tend to increase the productivity of the countries and therefore raise their standard of living. In particular, they have fostered the idea of short hours and low productivity. They have nearly all pursued a policy of unbalanced budgets . . ."

Would Impress Self-Help

He said "lavish distribution of American dollars" won't cure Europe's ills, adding:

"The sooner it is brought home to them that 90 per cent of their recovery depends on their own efforts, that after all American dollars cannot save the world or cannot save any particular country, and that American dollars can help to the extent of perhaps only 10 per cent of what can be done, and that the people of those countries must realize that we are not going to make good their deficiencies, the better it will be for them."

Taft renewed his call for creation as soon as possible of a new agency to dispense foreign aid, but said he would not hold up interim aid to do it.

"I believe it should be a board which will look just as much toward maintaining the productivity and activity in the United States, as it is concerned with maintaining them in Europe," he said.

Iowa Forced to Import Corn; Prices Soar to New Records

holiday buying helped raise retail sales in the week ended Wednesday moderately above the preceding week, and 8 to 12 per cent over the corresponding week a year ago.

In spite of the higher prices for farm prices, the Agriculture Department reported that the general trend of farm prices declined 1 per cent between mid-October and mid-November.

The decline, it was said, had had little effect on consumer prices, except of pork and pork products. Hogs, which averaged $27.60 per 100 pounds on October 15, dropped to an average of $24.20 on November 15.

Although Iowa was forced to buy corn this week to meet its needs, it jumped into first place in the Nation for the country's premier agricultural State.

For the fourth time in 20 years it passed California in the value of the product of its agriculture.

Higher prices for livestock, corn and wheat from Iowa and lower prices for California's citrus fruits, grapes, peaches, pears and dried fruits brought the change.

Iowa's products this year are estimated at $1,696,963,000; California's at $1,450,740,000.

Disputed Areas Abroad . . .

EUROPEAN "SORE SPOTS"—Map locates area in dispute in Europe as the Conference of Foreign Ministers tries to map boundaries for Germany. Russia demands that Poland be given the area (between lines A and B) awarded to it temporarily at Potsdam Conference. Britain and the United States have insisted that a commission be named to determine final boundaries. Secretary of State Marshall has hinted that the United States is determined to have Silesia, now occupied by Poland, placed at the service of Europe. Marshall said the United States approved of France's desire to incorporate the Saar Valley (c) within French economy with the economically merged British-American zones. The offer still stands, Marshall said.

Bevin Warns Molotov to Agree On Germany or West May Act

Informants said Marshall took little part in the three hours of disconnected discussion which was spotted by sharp exchanges between French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault and Molotov, and Bevin and Molotov. No agreements of any kind were reached, and on at least two occasions there was confusion as conflicting papers were referred to.

Bidault, as chairman, opened the session, and sought immediately to establish some order, pointing out that the ministers, and Molotov in particular, had not adhered to the agenda.

The French foreign minister, the sources said, stressed the point that the immediate question before the conference had to do with German peace treaty procedure beginning with the proposed establishment of a German border commission.

Molotov said he agreed with Bidault that "order was necessary" and then embarked on a speech on the necessity of a central German government. He demanded that the French make their views known on this subject, which he first brought up yesterday.

A conference briefing spokesman said Bidault pointed out that Molotov had refused to agree or even discuss the question of approval of French economic integration of the Saar area and added:

"I will not reply to your question since you did not reply to mine on the Saar."

Soviet refusal to agree to the setting up a commission to examine border claims on the grounds that such a step was "premature" brought from Bidault the comment that Russia's action did not augur well for the future.

The proposal for such a commission, advanced by Bevin, previously had been approved by Marshall and Bidault. The United States and Britain also agreed on a resolution approving economic incorporation of the Saar into France.

Meanwhile, the Foreign Ministers' deputies heard a French proposal that Russia receive 100 million dollars from current production in Austria as part of the general reparations settlement.

The French proposal was described as a new attempt to break the four-power deadlock on what constitutes German assets in Austria and what might be used for reparations. Once this deadlock is resolved the way would be open for the writing of an Austrian peace treaty.

The French suggested that Russia receive a third of the oil production of the Zisterdorg fields and take over virtually all Austrian shipping on the Danube.

Apparently the proposal was based on the reparations agreement reached between Russia and Finland, by which Finland in effect agreed to "buy" all German assets in her territory from Russia for 300 million dollars. Thus, Soviet ownership of former German property in Finland was avoided.

Marshall and Bidault Confer on Red Crises

London, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Secretary of State George C. Marshall conferred urgently today with French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault as the Communist-fomented French and Italian political crises threatened the Big Four Foreign Ministers' Conference with failure.

Marshall was understood to have told Bidault that the United States would give every possible help to prevent either Communist or De Gaullist extremists from attaining power in France.

But it was believed that he probably told Bidault also that if the United States had to make a choice it would have to support Gen. Charles de Gaulle rather than see France go by default to Communists.

United States officials reported that Bidault gave a pessimistic report of France's political and economic difficulties.

These high officials said they felt that the United States would be foolhardy to make compromise agreements on Germany before finding out the result of the present Communist test of strength, especially in France.

Yank Leader Of India Raids Interests U. S.

New Delhi, Nov. 28 (AP).—The United States Embassy said today it is investigating reports that a former Army sergeant is leading a company of Northwest Frontier tribal raiders against the Indian and Kashmir state army forces in southern Kashmir.

Accounts published in New Delhi and London said the man identified himself as Russell Haight of Denver, and that he wore cowboy garb. He was said to have left a road building job in Afghanistan to join the invaders of Kashmir at Rawalpindi in Pakistan.

The raiders have been ejected from parts of Kashmir, but still are attacking in the rugged, mountainous southern area.

The embassy could revoke Haight's passport, possibly causing Pakistan to deport him or request him to leave.

A British correspondent, who interviewed the man in Rawalpindi, said he wore a large hat, high yellow boots, a combat jacket and 3½ rows of campaign ribbons.

The British account quoted him as saying he quit his job in Afghanistan to join the Pakistan army, linked up instead with the "Free Kashmir" invading forces.

In Denver, his British-born wife didn't appear worried about her 26-year-old husband, Russell. She said he could take care of himself.

Mother of a year-old daughter, Susan Terry, she said her husband quit his job as an insurance agent in August to go to Afghanistan with a road-surveying firm.

(A native New Yorker, Haight enlisted in the Canadian army at the outbreak of war when 17 years old. He was in England when the United States came into the war and transferred to the American Signal Corps as a staff sergeant.

("He soon transferred into the Infantry because there was more action there," she said. They were married in England and she came to the United States in January, 1945.

("Nothing Russell does could surprise me," Mrs. Haight said. "He tried to stick with the insurance business, but before long he got restless and wanted to join this surveying crew.")

Fair Labor Act Repeal Proposed

By The Associated Press

Repeal of the Fair Labor Standards Act requiring overtime pay for work in excess of 40 hours a week was proposed yesterday by Representative Max Schwabe (R., Mo.).

Schwabe introduced legislation for the immediate repeal of the act during the period of emergency aid to Europe.

His proposal also would set aside the present 40-cents-an-hour minimum wage rate.

The bill was sent to the House Labor Committee, which recently held hearings on proposed changes in the Fair Labor Standards Act. Many of the committee's members favor an increase rather than a decrease in the minimum wage scale.

Palestine Vote Is Delayed; Arabs Seek Federation Plan

remain in the same country with the Arab majority.

The Arabs appeared certain that their hopes for a single, Arab-dominated state was doomed.

Their new plan, if agreed upon tonight by the Arabs, will be offered tomorrow to the Assembly.

The decision to adjourn for 24 hours came at the close of one of the most tense days in the United Nations history. Five guards were called into the visitors' gallery after repeated outbursts against the Moslem speakers who bitterly complained of American lobbying.

Five New York City policemen were also stationed in the gallery for the first time. They were called by the United Nations, which has complete authority over its own law and order.

Hundreds of rumors were peddled around the delegates lounge and press galleries by partisans of Arabs and Zionists.

The tenseness increased in direct proportion to the pressure apparently being brought upon the various governments.

Typical was the statement of Antonio Vieux of Haiti who previously had opposed partition. Today he issued a statement saying that on Wednesday he had been instructed by his government to oppose partition. Today he received contrary instructions.

"Therefore," he announced with some asperity, "I will undertake the duty to act on the basis of the last instruction . . . Due to the fact that I did not seek to influence the forthcoming of any instructions."

Important members of the United States delegation said they were trying harder to persuade other delegations to support partition than any efforts previously made on other American proposals.

Sir Zafrullah Khan of Pakistan complained:

"Whether the vote is going to be equally free and uninfluenced is not longer a matter for satisfaction . . . The United Nations is on trial today."

Another attempt to reconcile the Arabs and partitionists came from Dr. Alfonso Lopez of Colombia. He introduced a proposal to refer the partition plan back to the Palestine Committee to attempt reconciliation with Arab plans.

Aid Estimates Cut Too Thin, Acheson Says

San Francisco, Calif., Nov. 28 (Spl.).—Former Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson conceded tonight that the Administration may have based its foreign lending on faulty estimates in the past two years.

But if there was an error, said Acheson in a speech to the Commonwealth Club here, it was not in spending too many billions for Europe; it was in spending too few.

The real trouble, he said, was that European aid was cut so fine that no allowance was made for unforeseen setbacks. Vigorously indorsing the Marshall Plan for European recovery, he warned that the same mistake must not be made a second time.

Too Far-Sighted

The former Undersecretary was one of the architects of American foreign economic policy between VJ-Day and the launching of the Marshall Plan last June.

"Is the present difficulty due to lack of foresight and faulty planning on our part?" he asked. "It is hard for one who was deeply involved in the decisions to give a wholly objective answer. Even before the end of the war we did have a comprehensive recovery plan. And surely the truly crushing reverses—the disasters of drought and unprecedented cold and flood—were not foreseeable.

"If there was an error, it was in concentration upon the long-run factors of recovery and the inadequate allowance for the unpredictable hazards of the short run."

Reserves "Cut Too Close"

He recalled the plan followed between 1945 and 1947—firstly emergency relief through UNRRA for the hardest-hit countries and special loans for others like Britain; then the start of long-term lending by the World Bank and Monetary Fund and finally the lowering of the trade barriers through the International Trade Organization.

"I make this diversion, not to defend decisions in which I had a part," said Acheson, "but to point a lesson. It is that the errors to be avoided are the errors of cutting the reserves for contingencies too close.

"In spite of our care and forethought, it is clear now that we did not adequately allow for contingencies like those that have occurred—adverse weather, the withdrawal of eastern European supplies, the sharp rise in our own price levels.

"The difference between success and failure has, more often than not, been the reserves to throw into the battle at the critical and decisive point."

"Others Should Help"

In planning the present European recovery program, he went on, the United States should not "attempt a saving by overestimating the contributions which can be made by other countries in the Western Hemisphere and by the International Bank."

"It is highly desirable," he said, "that other countries should help to the full extent of their ability. But their ability is limited by troubles of their own, and we are deluding ourselves and needlessly risking disaster by relying heavily upon them.

"We must act at every turn with our eye on the result to be achieved, which is a recovered and self-supporting western Europe ... Primarily, this means that our aid must be sufficient and that we should not whittle it down, for by doing so we turn a recovery program into mere relief.

Purges Grain Controls

"No sensible businessman would join in a reorganization on a basis so skimpy that it could not succeed. To do so it to insure loss and failure."

Acheson's was the first major speech delivered under the auspices of the newly formed committee for the Marshall Plan, headed by former Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson.

Dealing with supply difficulties in the United States, he advocated "vigorous conservation measures and some direct controls" upon the use of grain, and also export controls on steel.

Graduated from St. Cyr, the French "West Point," LeClerc participated in the battle of France in 1940. He was wounded and captured at Lille. He escaped to fight again along the Aisne and again was captured.

Joined De Gaulle

Once again he escaped. This time he made his way to London where he joined Gen. Charles de Gaulle. He was sent to French West Africa where he made spectacular desert raids before joining up with Montgomery. In 1944, LeClerc landed in Normandy with Gen. Omar Bradley.

Last year he made a survey in rebellious Indo-China for the French government.

Strikers Demonstrate in France and Italy ...

THROUGH THE STREETS OF BARI striking workers parade to a meeting at which a general strike—which had paralyzed Italy's southeastern agricultural area—was called off November 22. Negotiations started on the laborers' demands for a larger share in the bumper olive crop in compensation for their work nique calling on all members to give aid to the railroad strikers.

This strike committee is opposed by the "Workers Force" movement, claiming control of 14 national unions.

In addition to the 20 unions under the National Strike Committee, Communists control five other unions.

The committee declared success of the railroad strike was its first aim, and that a second objective was an outright declaration of war on the anti-Communist minority led by Leon Jouhaux, 68-year-old former chief of the General Confederation. Jouhaux is now co-secretary of the confederation with Benoit Frachon, a Communist.

Betrayal Charged

The communique charged the minority group with "basely submitting to the government's policy and betraying the interests of the workers." The anti-Communists had agreed with the Communist majority that the government's proposed temporary $12 a month cost-of-living "indemnity" to workers was not enough but had directed its followers to return to their jobs pending negotiations. Primary demand of the strikers has been for a $32 increase in the minimum wage, with proportionate increases all along the scale.

Delegates of 4 of the 11 civil servant unions voted Thursday night to strike, including general administration, general economy (ration board employes), state workers, and post, telegraph and telephone employes.

Only the post, telegraph and telephone employes had actually walked out so far, however, and even their walkout was not general. Police guards were posted at the central postoffice in Paris and at the central telegraph office. Press wireless service was suspended for a brief time today, as was service of other companies depending on post, telegraph and telephone employes to maintain their cable and radio connections abroad.

The situation made any accurate estimate of the number on strike difficult, the Communists claiming four million were out, government sources saying only two million were off their jobs.

flanked police and carabinieri—national police—headquarters.

It was not ascertainable whether the general strike ended at midnight, because of the difficulty of moving about. (In Rome the Communist paper Unita said the strike did end.)

Communists during the evening had occupied several factories "to protect the plants during the strike."

Orders to the army to take control were telephoned by Premier Alcide de Gasperi personally from his sickbed in Rome to the Interior Department.

Decline to Act

But Lieut. Gen. Fernando Molech, chief of the army general staff, and Brig. Gen. Mario Capizzi, commanding the Milan garrison, simply declined to do anything. Capizzi insisted that he personally had received no order.

Capizzi, surveying the situation from outside the prefecture, said to this correspondent:

If I had received the order to take control, troops would already be presiding over the city. See those boys there. They are not guards. They are just friends of the prefect."

He then went inside to confer with "dismissed" Prefect Trollo.

Later the Interior Ministry canceled the order to the army to take over, explaining that the officers on the spot saw no need of military action.

In all the excitement there were only two instances of disorder. Police drove away two truckloads of Leftists who sought to wreck the plant of the rightist newspaper Il Mattino da Italy. Leftists beat up five persons in the Italian Social Movement headquarters.

The Leftist move, the boldest defiance yet of the De Gasperi government, was largely Communist-controlled and planned, but embraced the entire left wing.

Trollo was dismissed allegedly because he did not use sufficient force in combating Communist-led disorders here two weeks ago.

In Italy, a prefect is the head of a federal district. He is appointed by Rome and governs in the same of the national government.

Right Wing Socialist Mayor Antonio Greppi announced his resignation in sympathy with the protest against Trollo's dismissal.

The Communists asserted that mayors of 126 cities and towns in Milan Province also had resigned.

Police, and Carabineri with their rifle butts grounded, stood immobile while the prefecture and radio station were occupied.

"Resigned" Mayor Greppi remained in the city hall, which was nominally in control of Communist National Leader Palmiro Togliatti.

Even dismissed Prefect Trollo remained in his office overlooking the bivouack courtyard.

Trollo himself told a United Press correspondent that the government recently promised to make him Minister Plenipotentiary to the United Nations. The government itself, in telephone talks with Milan, said that Trollo was relieved of his duties only so that he could be given a bigger job elsewhere.

Former GOP Official Found Dead of Shot

Chester, Conn., Nov. 28 (AP).—Benjamin E. Harwood, 78, former chairman of the Connecticut Republican State Central Committee, was found dead on the grounds of his home here today, and Medical Examiner Eugene T. Callender said that he had committed suicide with a .32-caliber revolver. He had been ill.

Harwood was elected chairman of the Republican State Central Committee in 1937 after J. Henry Roraback, party "boss" for a quarter of a century, committed suicide. He retired in 1940.

40,000 Finns End Walkout

Helsinki, Finland, Nov. 28 (AP).—More than 40,000 Finnish government employes called off their strike today after Premier Mauno Pekkala's cabinet reportedly made plans to conscript strikers into the army.

Konsti Jarnefelt, chairman of the Civil Servants' Organization, announced the decision to end the walkout which had tied up communications, railroads, planes and ships and had closed schools for two days.

Jarnefelt said the government had promised not to take any reprisals against the civil servants. Parliament had proposed $6-a-month salary increases, but the employes considered it too low.

Pekkala, whose left-wing Socialist Union Party has merged with the Communists, had declared that the walkout constituted direct action against the government.

fore the American bastion fell to the Japanese.

Close to them in popularity with visitors aboard the red, white and blue train were the documents pertaining to the political emancipation of women and the flags of freedom.

Suffrage Documents Popular

Many a feminine eye looked soberly at the documents ranging from the Petition of the National Women's Suffrage Association to Congress in 1873 to the joint resolution of Congress in 1919 proposing the nineteenth amendment to the Constitution.

The eye of many a small fry grew thoughtful as he looked at the flag raised on Mount Suribachi, Iwo Jima, by the Marines, and that flown by the Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Forces in the European theater.

That other stuff "is history," but this—well, his brother or his uncle was probably there.

But for those who remember that in 1492 Columbus sailed the ocean blue, there was a copy of Columbus' announcement of his discovery, printed in Rome the next year.

After the last of the visitors had been shepherded out of the exhibit cars last night, the streamlined, seven-car train nosed out of the station.

Charlottesville, Va., this morning was to be the next stop for Freedom Train, which started its year's tour of the country September 17, the 170th aniversary of the birth of the United States.

Rep. Rankin Asks End of War Crime Trials in Reich

By The Associated Press

Representative Rankin (D., Miss.) said yesterday that continued prosecution of war criminals in Germany is "a disgrace to the United States."

If the United States intends to help Europe, Rankin told the House, "then for God's sake let's declare the war at an end and get down to business."

Suppose, Rankin said, the South had won the Civil War and had hunted down and destroyed Lincoln, Grant, Meade and leading northern businessmen.

But, interposed Representative Huber (R., Ohio) neither the North nor South was guilty of enslaving six million people or of burning up children in incinerators.

Atomic Ideology Held Grave Danger

Democracy Threatened Unless People Seek Understanding, Lilienthal Says

Chicago, Nov. 28 (Special).—Atomic energy, "in our own hands," can become a threat to our basic liberties, Chairman David E. Lilienthal of the Atomic Energy Commission warned tonight.

The prospect, which Lilienthal said was "a principal" danger to our democracy, will become a reality if Americans believe that atomic energy is so secret and so complicated that they cannot understand or deal with its implications, he asserted.

This danger, the notion that "technology dooms democracy," is more subtle than "the plotting and design of evil-doers, from without or within," he said.

Educational Program Urged

Lilienthal's warning was delivered to the American Education Fellowship. He pleaded for a "Nation-wide program, the purpose of which shall be the self-education of the people of this country in the basic facts and the essential meaning of those elementary forces of the universe known as atomic energy."

Atomic energy affects, and has changed, important functions of armies, navies, national security, the nature of war and the way wars are prevented and begun more than any other single event in centuries, he argued. It bears also on the whole concept of civil life and the day to day work, education, health and nutrition of every individual, he said.

Accordingly, he declared, decisions about atomic energy have at stake "your lives and happiness."

"But will you," he asked, "will the people as a whole, be in on those decisions of broad course and policy? Will the people's judgment be consulted, will it prevail?

"If the answer is no then have we not lost the essentials of democracy, and are our liberties not endangered?"

Lilienthal Reaffirms Theme

Lilienthal's theme—the necessity of an informed citizenry making decisions on atomic energy through the democratic process—is one that he has repeatedly stressed in public addresses. But hitherto, he has never stated it in such explicit and foreboding terms.

In efforts toward national security, he declared, "we must not unwittingly and carelessly adopt practices that are in reality authoritarian and dictatorial, that deny the essentials of our democratic faith and our democratic way of life."

He suggested that "perhaps a billion people are being promised a higher standard of living, and of dominion over the world for this price: that they dismiss as a dream the idea of individual liberty, a dream that many assert technology has now made a worthless illusion."

The principal event in our lifetimes, he said, is the fact that the people of Germany, Japan and Russia accepted the doctrine that "consent of the governed" is not compatible with technical progress. The argument is made, he said, that modern scientific advances require the abandonment of essential human rights and "the whole dream of human dignity as the cornerstone of our institutions."

Democracy at Stake

Lilienthal branded as "quite erroneous" two post-Hiroshima impressions, now widely spread:

1. That atomic energy "is too hopelessly technical and complicated" for the average man to understand.

2. That atomic energy is such a closely held secret that there is no way for the average citizen to become acquainted with it or its present developments.

On the contrary, he said, the American people are entirely capable of becoming familiar with its essential facts and a sense of their implication for the country. He continued:

"I believe I am right when I say that there is nothing in the nature of atomic energy, nor in the necessary requirements of secrecy in certain areas of knowledge that prevents the people as a whole from exercising their historic role of judging what shall be the course of public policy.

"But whether I am right, or whether I am wrong, this much I believe is clear, as I stated at the outset of my remarks: that if the American people, by default of their own or by the errors of those who are their public servants, do not have an active participation in these fateful matters, the substance of democracy has been lost."

Atomic Information Secrecy Is Discussed

By The Associated Press

Ways of safeguarding atomic energy secrets were discussed for seven hours today in conferences between the Atomic Energy Commission and the Joint Congressional Atomic Committee.

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), chairman of the congressional group, refused to disclose whether the conferees discussed Russian Foreign Minister Molotov's recent remarks that the atomic bomb is no longer a secret.

I would not want to say what we discussed about any other country, if anything," Hickenlooper told a reporter.

"We talked about a thousand different things and asked and answered a thousand questions."

Both physical safeguarding of atomic installations and screening of atomic employes by loyalty tests were discussed, he added.

Ex-Dartmouth Dean Found Shot to Death

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Dean Emeritus Earl Gordon Bill, 63, of Dartmouth College was found shot to death today and police said that he apparently committed suicide as a result of a nervous breakdown suffered in 1946.

Bill's body was found by his wife and son, John, in the living room of his home a short time after breakfast. He is also survived by a daughter, Mrs. Margaret A. Lewis of Westfield, N. J., and another son, Andrew.

Montgomery Scalp Disease Under Control

Scalp ringworm which last year assumed epidemic proportions among Montgomery County school children has been reduced substantially this year, Dr. Claire A. Christman, assistant county health officer, reported yesterday.

In 1945-46, there were 79 known cases among Takoma Park and Silver Spring children. Last school year the number rose to the epidemic figure of 91. Only 20 cases have been reported this year, the health official said.

The reduction was brought about by combined efforts of doctors, nurses, parents and teachers, lay health committees and barbers. A special ultra violet ray lamp was purchased by the Health Department and P-TA groups provided funds for treatment centers at the schools.

Dr. Christman, in charge of the program, estimated yesterday that at the present rate of cure there will be fewer than 10 cases of scalp ringworm by 1948.

Friendship Train Gets Flour From Area Lions Clubs

A gift earmarked with godspeed for the starving people of Europe was made yesterday by the Lions Clubs of the District and nearby Maryland.

The gift, 30 tons of flour, was turned over yesterday to John Donovan, who accepted it on behalf of the Friendship Train Committee. The flour, loaded in a freight car, is to be transported without cost by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to Weehawken, N. J., where it will be loaded aboard ship bound for Le Havre, France.

Havana Conference on Trade Enlivened by Political Clash

Havana, Nov. 28 (AP).—An angry clash between Dutch and Indonesian delegates and a warning from the Arab League that it would maintain its own preferential trade system spiced today's plenary session of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment.

The Dutch formally protested to the conference against charges by the Indonesian Republic that the Dutch were waging a war of aggression. The protest was referred to the parley's general committee.

The Arab states said that since the proposed charter for an international trade organization sanctioned preferential trade agreements among members of the British Commonwealth and between the United States and Cuba, they would reserve the right to do the same in the Near East.

Canada introduced a calmer note, urging acceptance of the charter as representing a "finely balanced compromise between nearly every conceivable interest and point of view."

Dana L. Wilgress, head Canadian delegate, supported yesterday's appeal by United States Delegation Chief William L. Clayton not to nullify the charter by overloading it with escape clauses and "impossible tasks."

Aly Bahgat, Egyptian delegate, backing pleas by Colombia and Mexico, replied the Arab states were firm in their intention to safeguard their common interests.

Dr. A. L. Gani, delegate from the Republic of Indonesia, incurred Dutch wrath by reciting a long history of the relations of Dutch and natives in the Netherlands East Indies.

Dutch Delegate A. B. Speekenbrink at once rose on a point of order to protest.

"We thought this would be an economic conference," he said, "and that politics would play no part."

Opening the afternoon's plenary session, President Sergio Clark ruled that "no delegation may talk in this conference on political topics."

The Indonesian delegate then withdrew all political remarks from his speech.

Cleric Who Lived On 'European Diet' Would Not Repeat

Chicago, Nov. 28 (AP).—The new minister of the Congregational Church of Rogers Park was satisfied today with his method of dramatizing Europe's need to his congregation—but he wouldn't do it again.

The Rev. Philip W. Sarles, 38, who came to the church eight months ago from the Central Congregational Church in Dallas, Tex., had just ended a month-long "European diet" by feasting on Thanksgiving turkey and all the trimmings.

During his 30-day fast, he limited himself to an intake of 1200 calories a day. At the end, he had lost 12 pounds.

"I felt as though I had to push myself harder than usual," he said of his experience. "There was definite loss of energy and I was hungry all the time, particularly between meals."

Extent of Controls Hidden, Taft Says

Ohioan Accuses Administration of Lack Of Good Faith in Presenting Powers Request

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), chairman of the Joint Congressional Economic Committee, yesterday accused the Administration of lack of "good faith" in proposing its anti-inflation program.

He told Commerce Secretary Harriman, testifying before the committee, that the Cabinet officer was really asking for "100 per cent authority" while purporting to seek only "limited" powers.

"I don't think your proposals are in good faith," Taft said.

Allocation Is Issue

The issue was power to allocate scarce materials. In requesting it, Harriman insisted it would be limited in two ways.

One was the number of materials to be allocated; he said it was planned to deal with only a few. The second limitation, he declared, would be standards set by Congress, which would have to be met before a Federal agency could impose allocations.

But after prolonged argument, Taft declared Harriman was actually asking for full powers to allocate anything and everything, and the only limitation was a verbal assurance of intent not to go whole-hog.

Harrigan was also closely questioned by Senator Watkins (R., Utah) on whether it was intended to "roll back" prices and if so, of what items.

Harriman Is Cautious

In his reply, Harriman was cautious about committing the Administration to direct action to cut back prices, if price control authority should be granted. He declared, however, that he "hoped" the result of the whole program would be to lower prices in meat and lumber. He added that the powers would permit the "grey market" in steel to be abolished, which would result in lower prices for that commodity as well.

In response to other questioning, Harriman disclosed that the Commerce Department, which already has powers to allocate tin, will soon issue an order cutting down the production of beer cans. He estimated it would save 250,000 tons of tinplate.

Taft snapped that whenever Administration officials were pressed to tell where and how they would apply the powers they sought, the answer always "comes back to beer and liquor."

Can't See Gains

He admitted he approved of these moves, but could not see how they would do much good, since there were no intentions to cut down "major" uses of scarce items. Harriman had previously declared there was no plan to limit steel for auto production or for other large consumer durable goods.

Harriman insisted, however, that curtailment of many small items would add up to an important total saving.

Following Harriman to the stand, Secretary of the Treasury Snyder repeated to the committee his disagreement with a suggestion of Federal Reserve Board Chairman Eccles for curbing inflationary bank credit.

Earlier this week, Eccles had proposed a law forcing commercial banks to set aside a "special reserve" over and above present reserve requirements. At the same time, Snyder had told a House committee he did not favor the idea because he believed it would not have the desired result of curbing inflationary granting of credit.

He repeated the point yesterday, provoking Taft to ask:

"What is the program of the Administration?"

Taft Wants to Know

Snyder said that bank credits came under the purview of the Federal Reserve Board and that he could not recommend specific legislation on this point.

"You're in the President's Cabinet. Mr. Eccles is not," Taft replied. "What we want to find out is: What is the Administration program?"

Snyder said he thought he could work something out with Eccles that would be satisfactory to both.

Snyder renewed his plea for an appropriation to finance a huge peacetime bond-selling campaign. He said the sale of bonds would take ready cash from the inflationary spending stream."

Taft said he was confident his committee would recommend appropriations for such an objective.

how can the parties dispose of it?"

The statement, approved by Grant, said GSI "did not want to be placed in a position where the only recourse open to the union was to call a strike in any controversy."

The Taft-Hartley Act requires the filing of non-Communist affidavits and financial statements by the union if the services of the NLRB are to be available in contested issues. Under the act, an employer is not required to bargain with a union if such affidavits are not filed.

Negotiators said yesterday no further talks had been scheduled, but both sides indicated the sessions would be resumed when the union's stand on the affidavit issue is announced.

Veteran Won't Sign Pledge

I'm as loyal as any American, maybe more so . . ."

The past three or four of Davis' 22 years have brought far more than an average lifetime of problems to this blond youth. Their record reads like an epic of misfortune.

A brother, George, one year younger, was killed on Okinawa fighting with the First Marine Division. A favorite uncle was killed in the Battle of the Bulge.

Lost Hand in Action

Walter, serving with the Army Medical Corps, was first wounded in southern France, then was hit by shell fragments in action along the Siegfried Line, resulting in the amputation of his left hand.

In September, 1945, he was discharged with a 100 per cent disability rating, and after a visit to the family farm in Corry, Pa., he went out West to visit families of Army buddies.

In August of the following year, he found a job he liked, at the Army base, Wendover, Utah, as a Civil Service employe on a fire-fighter crash crew. "The work was fine, and I got an excellent rating in efficiency," he said. "Then an order came through taking amputees off the job."

Pushups for Amputees

He decided to reenlist in the Army, on January 23, 1947, with a special amputee waiver, assigned to office work. "Some of the Army apparently didn't hear of the amputee program. At one place, we were ordered to do 'pushups' in general calisthenics—a lot of us refused, and were transferred."

Davis was sent to Walter Reed Hospital here, "to do some work and also get treatment for some severe headaches I still get." He later requested discharge, and last July 23, joined VA.

Fate had even another blow for him. In a hospital in France, he met a nurse's aide his same age, Jacqueline Gauche of Dijon, and later became engaged to her after an exchange of letters.

He hoped to bring her to this country as his bride, but a few months ago her mother died and she was left as sole support of a younger sister.

"I'd like to bring them both here, but I can't do it on the disability pay I'm getting of $152.40 a month—now that I'm practically out of a job," he said.

No Sudden Decision

"This wasn't a sudden decision," he said. "I never expected to sign the loyalty statement. But I didn't think too much about it until we were brought down last Monday to hand in the statements and have our fingerprints taken.

"Lots of us didn't want to sign it, but I was the only one who didn't. Everybody seemed surprised, though, when I insisted I wouldn't sign it, but some of them said they understood why. . . . It's something that's hard to explain. I can understand the reason in the State Department, but this is different. I don't think Communists should have the right to work for the Government. Be sure you say that. . . ."

Davis pondered over the next question.

"Where do I go from here? I don't really know. What can you say on a job application for the reason for leaving your last job in a case like this?"

funds, had killed himself with his service revolver.

When a check by the District auditor's office verified the shortages and mishandling of funds, Major Barrett promised to "take whatever action is necessary to see that there is no recurrence of the situation," adding that this would include "disciplinary action against whoever is responsible, if necessary."

Yesterday, however, he told a reporter of The Washington Post: "I have made no comment and will make no comment on these transfers."

Captain Lutz, new commander of the Fourth Precinct, has made no secret of his belief that a policeman must be "tough." Las month, in an address before the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association, he scoffed at stories of police brutality.

He said if citizens knew both sides of the story they'd wonder why "police don't use their sticks a lot oftener."

Pvt. George H. Robison, jr., will be taken off the detail assigned to the United States attorney's office and transferred to the Detective Bureau with the recommendation he be made a precinct detective in another change.

This leaves only two men in what was once a powerful detail assigned as investigators to the United States attorney's office. Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon commanded the detail until three months ago when he was made liaison officer at Municipal Court, a post formerly held by Lieutenant Hartman.

It also was announced that Sergt. James E. Dawn is returning from military leave as a major and will be a police sergeant at the Fourth Precinct.

Precinct Detective Keith G. Gosman has been assigned to duty as a detective sergeant at the Detective Bureau.

Lieut. Ray Aggleson goes from the Eleventh to the Fourth Precinct and Lieut. Burt Shedon from the Fourth to the Eleventh Precinct.

Corpl. Joseph A. Duley goes from the Twelfth to the Tenth Precinct and Corpl. James B. Jones from the Tenth to the Twelfth Precinct.

In addition, 33 rookie policemen who have been at the police training school since October 16, are being assigned to precinct posts.

pointed applicants and to explain to them why they were not selected.

Union sources declare that this has been the practice of the NLRB since 1938, under the first contract between the employes and the board. The contract has never been renewed, but board members have "gone along" with these provisions, the union asserts.

The employes' representatives sought a continuation of the agreement from Denham, who under the new law has the major hiring powers in the board. Both Denham and union agree on one thing: Denham refused.

The union appealed on Wednesday to the board, which has taken the matter under advisement. whether it can do anything about the situation is questionable, for the law gives Denham, not the board, "general supervision" over personnel.

Employes Give Side

The employes' side of the story is contained in a long memorandum, prepared by the union's 13-member executive council, headed by President Ogden W. Fields. It purports to summarize the council's meeting with Denham on November 17. This document states that when the council charged Denham with acting in a way which the board would find an unfair labor practice in a private employer's case, Denham replied:

"That might be under the Wagner Act, but this is under the Taft-Hartley Act."

Denham, interviewed yesterday denied the remark. He said that he told the union that the deal they sought was one made by a "Wagner Act Board," but that he could not go along with it.

The council also charged that Denham said he would not disseminate data on job requirements for the clerical personnel, because "they wouldn't understand them anyway."

Denham flatly denied making the remark or anything like it. "It would have been so impolitic that I wouldn't have said it," he declared yesterday.

The union council's memorandum gives this additional description of the case:

The union wrote Denham on three occasions, September 5, October 23 and November 12, and did not get a reply until recently. Denham said he would give the council half an hour.

At the meeting he said he would "agree to nothing"—that there was no place for an employe agreement in the Federal service. Hiring, he said, was a management prerogative.

Calls It a Sham

He said he would not post notices of vacancies in cases where he already knew of the best qualified person to fill the job, because a posting in that case would be "a sham." Nor, he said, would he set forth the objective qualifications for all jobs.

"You mean to determine when postings will be made and the basis of selection, unilaterally," the memorandum quotes a union officer as saying.

"Yes, unilaterally, if you want to put it that way," Denham is alleged to have replied.

He is quoted further as saying: "Let's get this straight: I'll agree to nothing. We simply do not have that kind of time under the present set-up to post vacancies and invite applications, look them over and have a waiting period . . .

"I am the best judge of who is qualified. When I make a decision I'm not going to change it. I haven't made any mistakes."

In rejecting union demands for a grievance procedure, Denham is alleged by the memorandum to have said:

"I'm not going to agree to hearings. I wouldn't have time to explain to every applicant why he was not selected and I will not allow members of my staff to do so . . . I'm not giving any reason for making my decisions to anyone."

Discussing the situation yesterday, Denham said the union wanted seniority rules to apply in filling vacancies, which would "more or less foreclose our filling jobs except from" employes already in the NLRB.

Tells of His Policy

He emphasized that it is and has been his policy to look for qualified employes for vacancies first from the ranks of NLRB employes. The staff is relatively small, he pointed out, so that he and his hiring officers know their employes well and are almost certain not to overlook anyone who is qualified.

He noted that the union officers had not accused him of any unjustices so far.

He said he "seriously questions the advisability of any public official entering agreements with his staff that would limit him in the selection of personnel. If he does that, he's just trying his hands."

He declared that he considered posting notices of vacancies a "proper and beneficial" procedure to make sure that no one was overlooked in filling a job. But, he emphasized, it was "farcical" to do it if he already knew of the best qualified person on the outside, or if he knew that no one among present NLRB employes was capable of the job.

The union, he said, tried to force an agreement on him under which he would be obliged to "defend every selection" he made. This was an arrangement he could not accept, he said.

Court Rules Bermuda Base a 'Possession'

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals ruled today the United States military base at Bermuda, obtained under a 99-year lease from Great Britain, is in effect a "possession" of the United States.

The decision was made in reversing a Federal Court order dismissing a suit for overtime compensation brought by 11 employes of Vermilya-Brown, Inc., the Necaro Co., Inc., and the Arthur A. Johnson Corp.

Liquor Law Enforcement To Be Topic

Richmond, Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—Improvement of liquor law enforcement will be discussed at a two-day meeting which opens Monday at the Hotel John Marshall under sponsorship of the National Alcoholic Beverage Control Association.

Representatives of the liquor industry, liquor control officials, police officers and a "dry" leader will participate in the sessions, the association announced in Detroit.

The Rev. Wayne W. Womer, executive secretary of the Virginia Church Temperance Council, Inc., Richmond, will present the prohibitionist viewpoint in an address on Tuesday. His topic will be, "The Drys and Liquor Control."

Members of the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and law enforcement officials from the Richmond area also will attend the conferences.

The meeting will be the third in a series of similar conferences held in the last year in the interests of strengthening liquor law enforcement by cooperation between the liquor industry and the administrators and by stimulating practical discusssions of measures tested in the various States.

Two Officials Face Charges In Greenbelt

Formal charges against two Greenbelt (Md.) town officials will be publicly aired by a nine-man investigation committee at 9 a. m. today in the Center School, Greenbelt.

The officials, named in complaints filed with the investigating committee prior to an October 10 deadline set by the Town Council, are Town Manager James T. Gobbel and Police Chief George Panagoulis. Gobbel has been accused of "mismanaging" town finances by paying salaries in excess of those authorized in the budget, while Panagoulis was charged with dereliction of duty by a suspended town policeman.

Although the investigating committee called for complaints against "any and all" town officials, today's hearing will be confined to the accusations against Gobbel and Panagoulis, since they were only persons named in charges filed prior to the October deadline. The committee will hear the persons making the charges and their witnesses, according to Mayor Thomas J. Canning.

The hearing was scheduled as a result of an investigation of the town's administration, authorized by the town council last September following a heated preelection campaign. Members of the investigating committee include the five council members and four other local residents, three of them Government attorneys.

Salisbury Cemetery Is Renamed

Salisbury, Md., Nov. 28 (AP).—Mrs. Irma B. Tilghman of Snow Hill, who dug up a 106-year-old deed showing original ownership of the land, has had accepted her suggestion that the name of Potter's Field here be changed to the Salisbury Public Cemetery.

Mrs. Tilghman found a deed dated August 18, 1841, in Worcester County land records. Wicomico County later was formed out of parts of Worcester and Somerset.

The deed conveyed 2⅝ acres of land from Sarah Huston to 11 men designated trustees of the Salisbury Public Cemetery for $60.

Mrs. Tilghman said the name indicated the land was intended as a burial ground for anyone and not necessarily a potter's field.

The American Legion post accepted her findings and changed the name.

Ownership of the land still remains uncertain, however. The 11 original trustees have died and no provision for transferring the ownership has been found.

Memorial services are held yearly at the cemetery, where seven Union soldier who died in the Civil War are buried. The soldiers died during a scarlet fever epidemic while camped here.

Arnold Service Is 'Very Good,' Bus Line Says to PUC Charge

More than half of Arnold bus passengers are riding equipment "less than one year old," the Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. said yesterday in describing its service as "very good."

The Arnold Line statement, filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, was in reply to a complaint by the Arlington County Public Utilities Commission, which had charged the line with maintaining "inadequate service."

If the ICC agrees to hold a hearing, the Arnold statement said, the line will try to show its service "is at least very good, and that such is the opinion of a vast majority of its patrons." But it asked the ICC to dismiss the entire PUC complaint.

Pointing to a deficit of more than $200,000 incurred before it obtained a fare increase October 21, the line added it had been "confronted with a complaint within less than 30 days from the effective date of the new fares."

The line anticipates that increased revenue from the fare increase "will make it possible to pay creditors and provide service commensurate with the growth of the community served," the statement said.

Answering PUC charges that Arnold operations had been curtailed September 1, the statement said no service had been omitted or eliminated which, if operated, "would take in revenue enough to pay 50 per cent of the operating cost."

The line has 135 buses in service, according to the Arnold answer; has placed 37 new buses in service during 1947; and the bus company has "gone to great lengths and into debt to improve its service."

PUC complaints that Arnold drivers and employes have a "generally discourteous attitude" were denied by the line, which said the PUC brief "blackens the character of everyone from drivers to management."

Broiler Marketing Topic at Salisbury

Salisbury, Md., Nov. 28 (AP).—Members of four cooperatives on the Eastern Shore will meet at State Teachers College here Monday to discuss new plans for the marketing of broilers.

The proposed scheme calls for weighing and grading dressed birds from each flock separately, but pooling the "kill" for periods of from 4 to 16 weeks.

Speakers at Monday's meeting will include Dr. Raymond W. Miller of Washington, president of the American Institute of Cooperation.

Dairy Conference Set at College Park

By The Associated Press.

Ice cream, marketing of milk and field problems will be the three principal topics of discussion at the third annual dairy technology conference which will be held at the University of Maryland, College Park, December 2-4.

Dr. Ira A. Gould, university professor of dairy manufacturing, said one day will be devoted to each of the three topics.

B. & O. Carman's Death Under Police Probe

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 28 (AP).—Circumstances surrounding the death of Raymond Kelly True, 53, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad carman, who died at Memorial Hospital yesterday after being removed from the city jail are being investigated by police.

True was picked up by police Wednesday night and according to Officer John G. Powers acted as though he were drunk. Dr. Benedict Skitarelic, who performed an autopsy at the hospital, said death was caused by a cerebral hemorrhage.

U. S. Tobacco Controls to Cut Principal Output 25 Per Cent

By The Associated Press

The 1948 production of the four major types of tobacco will drop about 25 per cent below this year if farmers carry out production control programs announced by Secretary of Agriculture Anderson.

Because of the threat of unmarketable surpluses, and the loss of important export markets, the Secretary has set up a total marketing quota of about 1,500,000 pounds for flue-cured, burley, dark air-cured and fire-cured tobacco.

The combined production of these types this year was about two billion pounds.

In announcements yesterday Anderson set next year's burley marketing quota at 474 million pounds, the fire-cured quota at 55,700,000 pounds and the dark air-cured quota at 21,800,000 pounds. He previously had fixed the flue-cured quota at 965 million pounds.

Production of these types this year were 525 million, 97 million, 40 million and 1,352,000,000 pounds, respectively.

The tobacco will be produced under an agricultural adjustment agency program calling for planting allotments and marketing quotas for individual growers.

Farmers may grow more than their allotments and quotas, but sales in excess of quotas are subject to a penalty tax equivalent to 40 per cent of the average price of the particular type of tobacco the previous year.

The national planting allotment for burley was set at 438,000 acres compared with 469,000 this year, and 560,000 in 1946.

Most burley growers will get 10 per cent smaller allotments than this year. Exceptions include farms of nine-tenths of an acre or less, new farms and farms whose allotments may be adjusted because of previous inequitable allotments. Burley allotments of nine-tenths of an acre or less cannot be reduced under existing law.

Most growers of fire-cured tobacco will get a 35 per cent cut in their allotments and growers of dark air-cured will get reductions of 25 per cent. Exceptions will be new farms and persons who get adjustments of previous inequitables.

Anderson said the national marketing quotas were set on the basis of supply and demand.

Tobacco Growers Urged Not to Reduce Crops

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—Dr. J. L. Maxton of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, today urged dark-fired tobacco growers not to cut their tobacco acreage next year, even though much of their crops might be taken by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

In a talk before growers, Dr. Maxton outlined the probable effects of any cuts in the present marketing quotas, which are now being considered by the Department of Agriculture.

He explained that type 21—grown in the Virginia belt—is in greater demand than other types, but has been lumped with types 22, 23 and 24.

The proposed cut, he said, would amount to 35 to 40 per cent, adding that Virginia, unlike Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana, all of which grow types 22, 23 and 24—does not have an excess of stocks as the other States do.

Week's Second Worst

Shirley's Lemon Rivals 'Dolphin'

By Richard L. Coe

'THAT HAGEN GIRL,' at the Warner, is just plumb horrible.

The writers of this one (Charles Hoffman adapted it from a novel by Edith Roberts) make the rather staggering assumption that not one of their characters has bat sense. Conceivably this might be rather fun in an impertinent sort of way, but "That Hagen Girl" is the most embarrassing exhibition we've sat through since—well, since "Green Dolphin Street."

Their story concerns a small town's gossip about an orphan adopted by a nice couple from the wrong side of the tracks. Everyone says—and they say it with deadening repetition for at least 18 years—that Mary Hagen is really the daughter of Tom Bates, a town lawyer of evidently ageless charm. All this gossip, they tell you, raises hob with Mary's life. People whisper about her at school, she loses the role of Juliet in the class play, she misses marrying the tall, dark and hammy son of the town's wealthiest parents. They're just awful, the things that happen to poor Mary Hagen.

If you know your cliches—and of course you do—you don't have to be told that finally Tom Bates explains to Mary just who she is—or, more exactly, who she isn't—and then ups and marries the girl.

Small towns may be small, as Hollywood so frequently informs us when it latches on to a burg that doesn't afford night clubs of Olympian proportions, but they aren't that small. The rich are impossible snobs and so are their dancing offspring. The school officials have small, mean minds. The one teacher with a grain of honesty isn't permitted enough sense to solve Mary's relatively simple problem. The seedy characters who, in an unlikely way, gather at the soda fountain for bits of gossip, are absurd puppets.

Poor Miss Temple

The dialogue is abysmal. When the thing is about to be cleared up near what you erroneously trust is the end of the picture, the honest school teacher interrupts a conversation that hasn't lasted 40 seconds with: "Now you two have talked long enough." In too many years of locker room conversation we never heard boys talk as snobbishly as these kids and we don't think the world's changed THAT much.

Ostensibly, "That Hagen Girl" is a vehicle for Shirley Temple. The youngster has all manner of supposedly dramatic situations: she rises to a last-minute call to play Juliet on the school stage (Just what this confusedly handled scene proves we don't know: supposedly Shirley's Juliet is a fine job, but the director can't keep himself from making fun of the youngsters doing the play—evidently an effort to bring some laughter to the film.) Shirley's foster mother passes away just as she's about to explain the whole mess. Shirley's tony boy friend jilts her. Shirley runs off to Chicago. Shirley tries to commit suicide.

Not even Miss Temple, who's so easy to like, can do anything with such trumped-up material. Ronald Reagan plays the chap who's supposed to be her father and turns out to be her husband.

Oh, gosh, what's the use of going any further into THIS?

YOU NEVER CAN tell what's going to pop up at the Pix . . . This time it's an Air Force documentary, "Thunderbolt," on view, the Pix says, for the first time locally . . . This is the story of a fighter-bomber group, with an introduction by Jimmy Stewart . . . The Technicolor feature-length film was directed by William Wyler, who won the Academy Award for his "Best Years of Our Lives" . . . Needless to say, it's a stunning record of air combat . . . The "Thunderbolts," in case you've forgotten, were the P-47s . . . The film depicts "Operation Strangle," onslaughts behind the German lines in Italy . . . Belatedly as it has arrived—and without the proper fanfare due it—"Thunderbolt" remains a stirring picture of World War II.

THOSE WEDDING pictures have cracked the long-standing house record of the Trans-Lux. Not since the opening on March 13, 1937, has the news-reel house had such crowds as it had Thanksgiving Day, attracted, reports the management, by those pictures from London.

WARNER-PATHE news, currently on view at the Warner, Metropolitan and Keith's, has some grand shots of local youngsters, a football game between the C Street Tigers and the Merrick Boys Club . . . These 80-pounders put on a swell game that's got more life in it than some of the games their huskier oldsters show . . . The kids really get in there.

WEEKEND attractions include the Children's Film Library showings at the Warner neighborhood houses . . . Sunday night there's a showing of the Mexican film, "Chico," at 8 in the International Student House, 1825 R st. . . . Community Education, 914 20th st., will be showing "The Spanish Earth" at the same hour.

TOMORROW: Richard L. Coe discusses two current films, "Green Dolphin Street," and "Torment."

"THAT HAGEN GIRL," Warner Bros. release produced by Alex Gottlieb, directed by Peter Godfrey, screen play by Charles Hoffman, from a novel by Edith Roberts. At the Warner.

Arlington Hospital Considers Change in Charity Case Plan

Withdrawal from a Community Chest Federation-Health Security Administration contract which provides some payment for charity patients is being "seriously considered" by Arlington Hospital.

Hospital Administrator Karl H. York said yesterday that the withdrawal, if made, would become effective January 1, 1948.

By the present arrangement, York pointed out, the hospital gets $5 daily for each Community Chest patient through the HSA. But with each patient receiving more than $15 worth of daily care, he added, "the hospital sustains a loss of $10 per patient."

Withdrawal from the present contract would leave Arlington Hospital with two possible alternatives, York said:

First, the hospital board of trustees might request membership in the Arlington Community Chest, receiving funds to carry HSA patients out of annual Chest fund drives.

Or the hospital board might ask the Arlington Community Chest for a share of the pooled hospitalization funds provided by the Chest Federation, administered under direction of the local Chest.

In a statement made last week, York had complained that his hospital has lost $49,979 through charity patients and from bad debts incurred thus far this year. This loss in 86 per cent higher than that for the same 1946 period, York added.

4 D. C. Men Held in Mt. Rainier Gaming Raid

Prince Georges County's gambling crackdown brought the arrest of four District men yesterday, bringing to 18 the number of persons taken in custody since the start of an intensive drive 10 days ago.

Seized in a raid on an apartment at 3323 Bunker Hill rd., were James H. Moore, 38, 2812 Buena Vista ter. se.; George Edward Simon, 38, 3821 17th st. ne.; James F. Hassett, jr., 21, 323 V st. ne., and James R. Robey, 45, 821 Maryland ave. ne.

All four were charged with both bookmaking and possession of numbers slips, and released on $500 bond on each charge. Hearing was set for Monday at 10 a. m. in Hyattsville Police Court.

A raiding squad led by Maj. Ralph Brown, county police chief, confiscated a quantity of equipment which police said was used in both bookmaking and numbers operations. Included were three telephones, a Western Union telegraph ticker, three adding machines, racing forms and numbers slips.

Major Brown was accompanied by Lieut. Charles N. Thomsen, county detective chief; Lieut. R. C. Sines, officer in charge of the Hyattsville police station, and Detectives Richard Pearson and Earl Huber.

Meanwhile, police said trial dates probably will be set for 14 other persons taken in previous raids in the county Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro Monday. Their cases were transferred to the Circuit Court at the request of Assistant State's Attorney Hervey G. Machen, jr., who demanded jury trials when the defendants appeared for hearing in Hyattsville Police Court last Monday.

China's Judd

The House proposal to adulterate interim aid to Europe with aid to China instead of waiting until Secretary Marshall has told Congress what is on his mind as a long-term program is the fruit of the persistent advocacy of Representative Judd of Minnesota. Mr. Judd is the leader of the Chiang-aiders. He wants to increase the size of our 1000-man military mission in China, though the xenophobic Chiang never takes any notice of them. He wants to send arms to China as part of a program for the succor of the hungry Europeans. The House Committee on Foreign Affairs appears to be allowing the Minnesotan to ball up the program in order to make a gesture to China which would be worse than useless.

Whence the passion? Representative Judd has a profound respect for the Chinese people born of actual experience. We all do. He has the detestation for the Communists that all Americans feel. But both the love of the Chinese and the loathing of the Communists seem to have robbed him of perspective. In China the Communist threat is not a phenomenon of Soviet expansionism. It goes back over 20 years, when a couple of Chinese units were left in Fukien Province, the remnant of the left wing of the so-called Nationalist Revolution of 1927 led by Chiang Kai-shek. It has thriven far more on Chiang's ineptitude than on Soviet help, and few definite "leads" on this latter can, indeed, be traced.

American policy till General Marshall took over the Secretaryship of State was to seek some agreement between the Communists and Chiang. At all costs we wanted to avoid the present civil war. From Ambassador Hurley to Ambassador Stuart a Communist-Chiang pact has been our policy. To further it, General Marshall undertook his mission to China. Representative Judd says that Marshall's orders were "deliberately written" by "certain people" in the State Department to make sure he failed. He calls the "certain people" a "Red cell." This is a canard. It is a canard because it is absurd. The notion that General Marshall was so simple as to be an errand boy for any "Red cell" bent upon trapping him is too silly to entertain. That he went on a mission in which he did not believe is not entitled to the slightest credence. Such nonsense is a measure of the lengths to which the Chiang-aiders have gone in their anxiety to put Chiang on an American dole. The fact is an obvious one in the light of Marshall's stature—he was himself a party to the instructions he took to China. The pity is that before he left for London Secretary Marshall did not react to the badgering he got about China (not to mention the embarrassment) by spiking these statements.

To be sure, the swollen Communist armies are now led by men who are Soviet-indoctrinated. Perhaps 1 in 10 of the armies is a Communist in greater or less degree. But there cannot be the slightest doubt that the armies are heavily padded with the disaffected. No liberal in the recognizably progressive sense of the word feels at home in Nanking amid the corruption and spying that goes on there. The Democratic League in whom Secretary Marshall pledged his hopes when his work for Communist-Kuomintang went up in smoke is now proscribed. China is groaning under oppression from the clique around Chiang Kai-shek as it is under the Communists. That we ever tried to heal the breach between Yanan and Nanking should surely be a sign to the American people that the situation in China was different from Europe's situations. The trouble there is far more national than international. Russia, who used to call the Chinese Commies "radishes," is interested in keeping China chaotic, and its intervention is covert and minimal, if it exists at all. In western Europe, where the Communists are Muscovite pawns, it is interested in control, and no holds are barred. It is in western Europe that the aggressor against the United States is massed. It is there that immediate danger lies. Representative Judd says that if we don't win this war of ideologies in Asia, we shall lose it in Europe. Exactly the converse is correct. In these huge spaces, where backwardness is the rule, communism has not developed anything like its European power.

As in war, so in peace, you must know with what you are contending. In China it would be a bog. In Europe it is an aggressive communism directed from the outside against independence. And the first principle of strategy is to meet the danger where we are most vulnerable. We hope Congress has more sense than to go off on a tangent in China—that it acts after a most careful estimate of the world situation.

Dismantlement

Back of many of the protests against the dismantlement going on in western Germany is a desire, we feel, to see Germany restored as the economic kingpin of Europe. That isn't, of course, acknowledged. The argument is that to tear down plants in Germany is to hold back recovery in Germany and to keep Europe on an American dole. The argument is plausible until the facts are examined. No destruction of factories is involved in the dismantlement program. All that is taking place is the extraction of excess machinery and its reinstallation in the victor countries by way of reparations. Displaced persons do most of the labor used in the transfer. As Acting Secretary of State Lovett said on Wednesday, removals are restricted to plants put up for the Nazi war machine: i. e., after 1936. That is warrant enough, surely, for dismantlement. To be sure, the plants would not have been employed to turn out munitions as long as Allied controls remain in effect. But to remove them is to remove a specter which otherwise would foment the residual fear of the furor Teutonicus on the part of Germany's neighbors, particularly France.

But a far more persuasive argument for dismantlement is the very argument used against it. It is said that these plants are necessary to the restoration of peacetime work in Germany so that the Germans can get off America's back and contribute to European revival. The fact is that there is ample equipment left for the recovery of Germany—not only to look after herself but also to participate on more than even terms in the economy of Europe. An example is the steel industry. This is now producing at the rate of 3½ million tons a year; under the revised level of industry to be allowed to Germany, it can go up to 12 million tons, and only the capacity above 13 million tons would be dismantled. Isn't that sufficient to enable Germany to revive? As a consistent opponent of Morgenthauism from the outset, we can see no "strangulation" in the new schedule. An allowance of three and a half times the present output and over twice as much as the first allotment after the Potsdam Conference (when the Allies were still under the influence of Morgenthauism)—these are goals which spell growth, not strangulation. Incidentally, what is keeping output so far below the new permissive level is, clearly, not the taking away of plants, but a shortage of food, fuel and raw materials. This is a shortage common to all Europe. Some of these shortages are not so pronounced among Germany's neighbors as in Germany—as, e. g., Belgium—and the removed tools can therefore be put in operation without delay.

The agitation against dismantlement is producing a variety of results that are inimical to our foreign policy. It is, of course, troubling Germany's neighbors, not only because of their fear of a risen Germany and the seeming sympathy with it of many Americans; but also because we are bound by agreement with them to allocate the spare machinery in reparations. It is being echoed by the Germans who, hearing the argument, repeat it, hoping thereby to escape the due demands upon them. It may encourage General Clay, who thinks of Germany in terms of his island bailiwick, to go slow on removals. And it makes a case for Soviet suspicion. For the protests against dismantlement seem to emanate from persons who see Germany again in terms of the years between—that is to say, as the efficient collaborator with American business, the bulwark against the barbarous and aggressive Slav. Let us beware of going from the extreme of the Morgenthaus to the extreme of the Bourbons, and center our policy on the integration of Germany with the economy of Europe.

Then And Now

The contract scandals brought to light by the Senate War Investigating Committee, culminating in the sensational inquiry into the activities of General Meyers have given rise to a degree of public resentment and indignation that does us credit. We say that, because we believe that the strength or weakness of democratic government is clearly reflected in the attitude of the people toward wrong-doing by persons holding positions of public trust. In view of the size of the war program and the speed with which it had to be pushed, the surprise is that so few cases of gross fraud and dishonesty have been brought to light. Certainly there is no good reason for feeling disillusioned because a few men in high places have had their private peculations exposed to the public gaze. On the other hand, it is encouraging that public condemnation of these few is unsparing and that investigations have been followed by prosecution of the offenders.

The treatment of General Meyers, for example, stands in sharp contrast with the tender handling of some of the Civil War wasters who used high office to feather their own nests. The novelist, Anthony Trollope, who visited this country during the Civil War years, discussed contract scandals at so[illegible] in an essay on the Army of the North. He referred to the unsavory transactions of a political friend of Secretary of War Cameron, who had been supplied with two million dollars of Government funds and had spent the money for an amazing assortment of miscellaneous stores for speculative purposes. Mr. Cameron was not turned out in disgrace, however, because of his connections, but was sent as Minister to Russia to disembarrass President Lincoln. Mr. Trollope recites some other instances drawn from the files of a House investigating committee regarding the fortune amassed in a few months by the brother-in-law of Secretary of the Navy Welles. Illegal payments made by the much admired General Fremont also came under review. Indeed, as Trollope says, commenting on conditions in Missouri at the time General Fremont was in command, "every description of fraud was perpetrated, and this was done not through the negligence of those in high command; but by their connivance and often with their express authority."

Anthony Trollope was a hard-headed realist, not disposed to waste time berating those who succumb to temptation. But he was shocked at the public's complacent attitude toward thievery, amazed that members of the Cabinet involved in contract scandals remained in public life after exposure, that General Fremont's devoted followers loved him just as well after as before his irregular activities were brought to light. "The individual corruption of any one man—of any ten men—is not much," says Trollope. " . . . but the light in which such corruption is viewed by the people whom it most nearly concerns is very much." The careless and cynical attitude that this English visitor believed to prevail among us was, in his opinion, a major menace to the perpetuation of democratic institutions. We agree with that view, and conclude that the country has made tremendous strides toward ridding itself of its love of what Trollope called "smartness"—that is, admiration for men who achieve high place even if it be by corrupt means.

Buying The Crop

The request of the Department of Agriculture for authority to purchase the entire 1948 wheat crop if need arises is strictly an emergency measure. It must be viewed in the context of the broad allocation powers asked by the department to insure that our grain goes where it will do the most good in maintaining the balance between vital foreign shipments and our minimum domestic requirements. These powers are the embodiment of what President Truman called for in his message to Congress. They include, among other things, set-aside orders, control of inventories, limitations on use, priorities and transportation restrictions with respect to grain, as well as controls over storage facilities, the distribution of fertilizer, and the sale of farm machinery. Authority to purchase the wheat crop would be a reserve power to be used in the event a full-blast food emergency develops.

These are of course drastic curbs on a free economy. They would not be tenable in peacetime but for the gravity of the world food situation and our involvement in it. It is by no means certain that all or even many of the powers will have to be invoked. In their testimony before the Joint Committee on the Economic Report, representatives of the Department of Agriculture stressed their hope that self-discipline and voluntary methods will see us through. If 1948 wheat and corn crop conditions are good and European agriculture recovers from its low 1946-47 level, such methods may be sufficient. But it is important, we believe, for the Department of Agriculture to have legal authority to act promptly if voluntary means prove inadequate. Such a grant of authority by Congress would be merely the insurance essential to protect the domestic economy as well as to guarantee the basic needs of the European Recovery Program.

Wheat is to the food economy what steel is to industry. This is especially true with respect to exports because of its great calorie value in comparison with other foods. Even the greatest wheat crop on record this year has not been sufficient to meet all the demands upon it. The result has been the sharp rise in wheat prices. If anything further should happen to impair the 1948 wheat crop, or if next year's corn crop should again be subnormal, wheat prices might rise substantially even from the present level. This, of course, would be a disastrous boost to inflation; it also would make foreign aid much more costly. It is to prevent precisely this situation that governmental authority to buy the wheat crop is requested.

The power is similar to that now exercised by the Canadian Wheat Board and to that employed by our own Government during the war with respect to soybeans and wool. Under it the Government would have the sole authority to purchase wheat on farms and then to resell it to essential users. This would presuppose a fixed price for wheat, which is probably the most drastic element of the Department of Agriculture's request. A fixed price for Government purchases in actuality would be a form of price control which might obviate the need for such restraint at distribution levels on wheat and meat. If purchasing authority is approved by Congress, it might be well for the Department of Agriculture to consider reviving the system of "borrowing" wheat which it used last year to discourage withholding. That would mean allowing the farmer to take payment for his wheat during the next calendar year for income-tax purposes.

As Congress is called upon to grant extraordinary authority to cope with the food emergency, legislators and the public as well have a right to ask when the emergency will end. The answer, of course, is that it will end when production is restored sufficiently in other countries so as to enable them to supply a greater portion of their own needs. In this connection Secretary Anderson has made a timely proposal for a conference of the world's Agriculture Ministers to develop a cooperative plan for meeting food deficits and thus lessen the dependence upon the United States. As Mr. Anderson has aptly observed, "the security of the world is too important to entrust this responsibility to any one nation."

Correction

The Washington Post regrets an error in the editorial "Transfer of Schools" which appeared on this page yesterday. We quoted Leonard S. Hayes, who spoke for 15 Negro organizations, as expressing the belief that the advantages of a full-time program for a larger number of students "far outweighed the disadvantages" of using "old, decrepit school buildings." What Mr. Hayes said to the Board of Education was that he believed that the advantages of a full-time program are "far outweighed by the disadvantages" of accepting "old, decrepit school buildings."

Royal Wedding

In Miss Marbury Beall's letter of November 25, nominating me for "No. 1 curmudgeon of 1947" I find the same deplorable confusion that has characterized the royal wedding throughout. Here again is the confusion of sentimentality with practicality that prompted my original polemic. Like Miss Beall, I feel that pageantry is very nice, and quite diverting, but I doubt that it would long take my thoughts away from my hollow insides were I in the position of the British people.

One great fallacy in her argument is her contention that the British people are all having their pall lightened by the affair. The last issue of Time quite openly gives the opinion that a large number of Britons have adopted the curmudgeonish attitude of this writer. From logic one would expect objections from the starving multitude, although the press here has devoted itself exclusively to the tinsel and sigh division.

Perhaps it is fortunate that Miss Beall and a number of her fellow Americans are delighted with the proceedings, since they are paying for it in part. The British budget this year runs to 15 billion dollars, four and one half billions of which come from our coffers. Personally, I would rather see my part spent a little more wisely. To provide opiates for the sinking patient is hardly the most intelligent course when radical surgery seems indicated. FARLEY O. BEASLEY.
Washington.

Having read the comments of Mr. Beasley and Mr. Gardner (November 21 and 25, respectively) on the royal wedding, I feel that as a true Britisher I may be able to enlighten them a little with some facts about a country which they seem so quick to criticize.

I left England only a few months ago to come to the States, and having spent all the war years and those immediately following in my own country, I feel that I should know the reactions of my fellow-countrymen. It is obvious that these two gentlemen lack imagination or else they would appreciate just how much an event such as the royal wedding means to a pleasure-starved nation. If they had listened to the broadcast, the cheers of the people would have convinced them. The people who were cheering were for the most part the poorer and the under-privileged ones, those for whom Messrs. Beasley and Gardner express concern.

It would be difficult to find an Englishman who objected to the expense and effort exerted to make the wedding day a day long to be remembered. Obviously Mr. Beasley and Mr. Gardner find it impossible to understand the love and respect the English people have for their royal family, a feeling which is more prevalent than ever during these years of suffering. I can only say that I feel proud to belong to a nation whose people still retain that spirit of good will which has prevailed and always will prevail. K. A.

Chest Suggestion

Your appeal for the Community Chest, "A Community Crisis," which appeared on the front page of The Washington Post of November 23, is excellent.

I found out from observations in my neighborhood that humble people with very little income and serious economic problems did contribute very generously to the Chest if one considers their limited incomes, while some other people with a lot of money gave very little, in most cases shamefully little. Here is my suggestion! Why don't you send out a couple of your best reporters to find out about the many humble people, workers, farmers, housewives, who have to count their pennies and still manage to give generously to the Community Chest? Get their pictures, their background, a word on their simple, generous virtues, on the front page of your paper, or in a conspicuous part of your paper. This public recognition is due to many of them. Moreover, it would work wonders to drive many others to do the same. J. FACCI.

Aid To Italy

In your November 26 issue I notice that Representative Robert B. Chipperfield of Illinois has suggested a cut of 48 million dollars in the European aid bill now being debated in Congress.

The Italian people are a serious and honest people. They need the help of America to re-create what was destroyed during the invasion of the German, American and English armies in the war. The Italian people will return any loan made to them for their own rehabilitation. No party in Italy will be able to establish a radical government. The majority of the Italian people are sick at heart of all parties. They are, above all, patriots and they wish to establish a new government of the people, for the people, regardless of any political party.

Yesterday I visited the Lincoln Memorial. What a divine inspiration it gave me, that real man, sitting and meditating in such a temple of beauty! How can Congress be mean to the people of the world looking at such a compassionate father of all humanity? How can Representative Chipperfield cut European aid, take 48 million dollars off, when he can read every morning the simple and strong sentence uttered by Jefferson, carved on the stone front the Patent Office here—"Cultivate peace and commerce with all?" ENZIO STASIO.

Chinese Communists

Though mine is one of two recent letters in The Washington Post which your November 25 correspondent, "Veritas," attacks, I had no intention of answering his faulty reasoning until I read in another part of the paper Dewey's request for quick aid to China. What I am willing to forgive in a private citizen—who I assume "Veritas" to be—I cannot accept from an official campaigning for the Presidency. I shall, therefore, try to inform both citizen and official on a matter of the highest importance to our country.

In the first place in my letter of November 18 I never said that the Chinese Communists were not identical with the Russian variety. My words were that they were not "first cousins of the Soviets." My point was that the Russians have not aided the Chinese guerillas and there is no evidence that Russian support is now being offered.

It seems to bother "Veritas," and possibly also Dewey, that Mao Tse-dung talks like a Russian Communist. What "Veritas" does not seem to know is that both the Kuomintang and the Chinese Communists claim to be legitimate heirs of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, who not only founded the Chinese Republic but was a firm believer that the Russian Communist system should be established in China. It is true that Chiang Kai-shek very soon broke away from the principles of Sun Yat-sen, but it is equally true that long before the Comintern became defunct officially it ceased to have much direct contact with the Chinese Communist Party. As a matter of fact, in 1927 Mao was expelled from the Comintern for violating the party line and the Chinese Communist Party "became a distinctly Chinese offspring of Marxism firmly rooted in the national problems" of China.

It is more important to know what a party does than what it calls itself. (There are rather complex reasons why the Chinese guerillas and partisans still allow themselves to be called "Communists.") If "Veritas" is impressed with quotations from Mao's The New Democracy, which was published in 1940, perhaps he will be interested in an interview which Mao gave to Harrison Forman, travelling for the New York Times in 1944.

I am quoting from Report From Red China (pages 178-179), in which Mao says: "We are not striving for the social and political communism of Soviet Russia. Rather . . . for the liberation of slaves. In China we have many millions of slaves, shackled by feudalism. In trying to liberate these millions and improve their livelihood by means of agrarian reforms, we do not intend to go so far as the Russian Soviets." Again: "Politically, too, we differ from them in that we neither call for nor plan a dictatorship of the proletariat. We do not advocate a collectivism that discourages personal initiative—in fact, we encourage competition and private enterprise."

I could quote for pages from Forman, Edgar Snow, T. H. White and other authorities to show that the Chinese Communists have no intention of duplicating the Russian system. It is possible that some of the Chinese Communists have advocated a pro-Russian policy and the introduction of it into China, since there is freedom of expression in the Communist areas, but I challenge "Veritas" to prove this to be the aim of the Chinese Communist leaders.

As for Lin Yutang, he has for years been a mouthpiece for the Nationalist government of China, and a frequent contributor to its propaganda organ in this country—the China Monthly Magazine. During the war he published such a patent whitewash of the Nationalist government that about a dozen American correspondents issued a public statement refuting some of the more hysterical statements in that book.

What Americans must realize is that a few million dollars will not bolster the regime of Chiang Kai-shek and prevent attack by the Communists. The latter number 90 million people and have shown by their continued military victories that they cannot be subdued except by some compromise on the part of the generalissimo. Only reform will bring peace to China, and Dewy's statement that "China's economic life" can be maintained by an annual American subsidy could not be further from the truth. He just doesn't know the facts. T. A. HAMILTON.

Glamorizing Work

Bait For Women

COURTSHIP of the woman who has a good right arm, or even a good head, constantly grows more ardent in many countries. How to get her out of home into factory or field now concerns many men who once worried over how to keep her in the kitchen. For she is urgently needed to help rebuild devastated countries and produce exports that will bring in trade.

Even in this country women are still being wooed industrially. For they are needed in restaurants, laundries, department stores, some types of factories, in many lower-paid jobs that don't attract men. They are also needed desperately as teachers and nurses. But in this country a woman with a professional education can still stay home if she wants to. In most European countries she is expected, even though married and with children, to work at her profession, so great is the need for her services.

Hence Tom Sawyer's technique of getting his fence whitewashed is being applied to women by their economic suitors. Latest European bait is glamour. Bulgaria is conducting a publicity campaign to glamorize the woman "shock worker"—the manual laborer who does more than the average. She is portrayed as a husky "work heroine," with pickaxe on shoulder, who, because she can shovel, lay railroad ties or chalk up new records in textile mills, attracts men, while her idle, smoking, drinking, "decadent" rivals remain wall-flowers.

OTHER European countries are wooing women workers with such promises as day care for children, inexpensive laundry, clothing-repair stations, marketing services. Few of these have been realized as yet, though such benefits as maternity leave on pay, medical attention during pregnancy, time off to care for sick children and equal pay with men have been widely granted.

France has done much toward improving industrial conditions for women. Britain, which needs women to work in its textile mills, has lagged behind the Continent, though its factory owners are now making some concessions. It has opposed equal pay for women on the grounds this would promote inflation, decrease size of families and eventually contribute to women's unemployment.

It is expected soon to slash income taxes for married women, hoping to induce many to go into mills. Some Lancashire mills have glamorized their plants by painting old whitewashed walls and even machines. They have installed lockers and rest rooms; some have added clinics, canteens, day nurseries—even air conditioning. However, this isn't general, and British women, having had a taste of better wages and workign conditions in munitions plants, don't want to go back to the mills.

BRITISH employers have awakened too late. In lesser degree American employers are learning the same lesson. Many women here who left uncomfortable factories, laundries, hotels, restaurants, to work in war plants are dead set against going back to their old jobs. Working conditions seem to figure in their decisions more than do lower wages.

Neither women in Europe nor in the United States are likely to be deceived long by surface efforts to glamorize their jobs. Painted walls will help more than poster exhortations, but their response to industry will depend upon more tangible offerings. They have found out they no longer have to work in dark, stuffy places, hang their wraps on nails, eat cold lunches, breathe foul air, have their nerves riddled by noise, strain their eyes from inadequate lighting, and be paid less than a man for the same kind and quality of work.

Married women workers have found that the double job of factory and home takes too much doing unless they have community aids, also comfortable places to work. With their new found power they are likely to force reforms in working conditions throughout the world that will not only benefit them but men workers as well.

Chinese Communists

"Veritas" misses the point in his letter of November 25, entitled, "Chinese Communists." Or so it seems to me.

It is not whether the Chinese Communists are dominated by Russia—and I do not think the question was posed in the letters "Veritas" criticizes. The point is whether it is morally right or economically sound for the United States to help the present "legitimate" government of China. The past conduct and policies of that government have been most reliably reported by top United States journalists and commentators and the situation ably analyzed by the contributors to and the editors of our own Washington Post. The evidence is overwhelmingly against the present regime in China, convincing if disheartening proof that aid is neither right nor a sound and effective use of our limited resources.

Intolerant Philatelists

I would like to call your attention to William M. Stuart's column for philatelists in The Washington Post of November 23. This column contains the following statement: "Collecting stamps is a fine hobby, but the collecting of proofs not usable for postage is simply a fad which should be outlawed."

I am neither a collector of die proofs nor ordinary postage stamps, but a chance reading of this illuminating sentence brought my blood to a quick boil. It is a prize example of utterly unnecessary narrow intolerance.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

Revolt Is Brewing

THERE HAVE been angry mutterings in the cloak rooms before, but there are now for the first time real signs of a serious rebellion among Senate Republicans against Senator Robert A. Taft's leadership of the Senate majority. If the rebellion materializes it will center, of course, around the price issue. For a number of Senate Republicans are making no secret of the fact that they regard Senator Taft's root-and-branch opposition to the Administration program for inflation control as bad politics if nothing worse.

The revolt is still in the talk stage, and it may never crystallize into action. Yet already close observers of the Senate scene are beginning to tick off the names of those Republican Senators who might be expected to defy the powerful Taft. Highest on the list are the names of two freshmen from New England, Ralph E. Flanders of Vermont and Raymond Baldwin of Connecticut. Already they have outspokenly criticized what they regard as Taft's "negative approach" to the price issue.

Baldwin and Flanders might well be joined by at least four other New Englanders, Massachusetts' Senators Henry Cabot Lodge and Leverett Saltonstall, Vermont's Senator George Aiken and New Hampshire's Senator Charles Tobey. Tobey has already summed up his own attitude towards the price issue in the phrase, "Damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead," an approach which seems to indicate something less than full agreement with Senator Taft.

THIS HARD core of New Englanders may well be reinforced by a scattering of recruits from elsewhere. The perpetual maverick, Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, although an outcast from the party councils, is expected to support a positive price program on the Senate floor. Another probable recruit to the rebels is Senator John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky. Cooper has told intimates that he is convinced that the Republican record on prices was directly responsible for the recent Republican debacle in Kentucky. Senator Arthur V. Watkins of Utah has also amazed his colleagues by proposing Government purchase of the entire wheat crop.

Other possible recruits for the Republican price rebellion include the able Senator Irving Ives of New York, and Senators William Knowland of California, Edward Thye of Minnesota, Alexander Smith of New Jersey, C. D. Buck of Delaware, and Zales Ecton of Montana. Ecton, a member of the Price Subcommittee for the West, received a vivid object lesson in the meaning of the price situation from his daughter and son-in-law, who were trying to live on the West Coast on $2400 a year. Finally, Senator Arthur Vandenberg will never trespass openly on Taft's domestic policy bailiwick, but he too has undoubtedly heard from industrial Michigan echoes of the mounting anger about prices. And he is in a better position than most to judge what $5 wheat might do to American foreign policy.

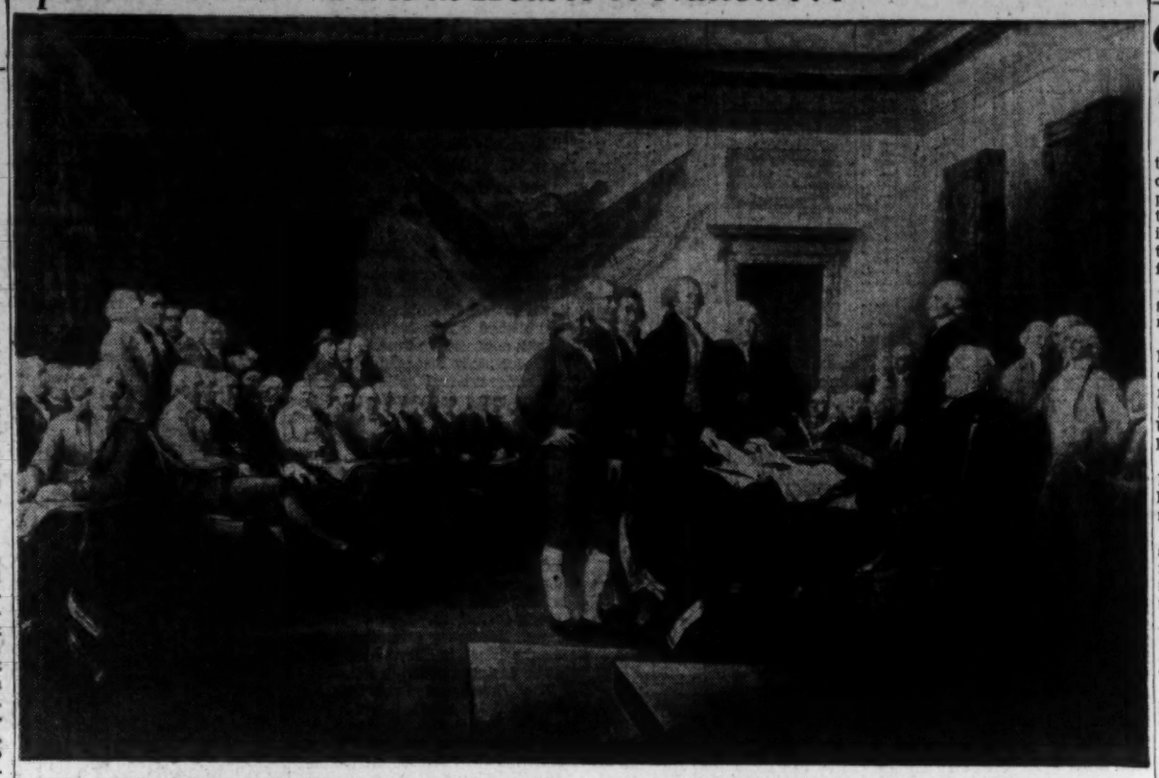
This listing is, of course, largely speculative. Yet if even a dozen or so Senators openly defied the Taft leadership on the price issue, that would amount to the first really serious break in Republican senatorial ranks. The episode of last week's Republican conference illustrates why such a break is now a serious possibility.

AT THIS conference the Flanders-Baldwin group urged that the price issue would certainly decide next year's election, that the Republicans must avoid merely whittling down on the Truman program, and that they must emerge instead with a positive Republican program. Taft seemed to agree. Yet immediately after the conference, he announced his intention to whittle away still another Truman item, that calling for controls on the feeding of high-priced cattle. Hard feelings resulted, and they have not been soothed by an editorial in the Republican News written by the fatuous Republican chairman, Carroll Reece. The editorial is captioned "A Cop in Every Kitchen," and it consists of furious semantics about "totalitarian methods."

The kind of program the Republican moderates would like to substitute for this unrewarding rage was indicated in the report of the Flanders-Baldwin Subcommittee of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report. This report suggests many of the measures proposed in the Truman message. It suggests further that meat be rationed immediately, and that price controls, rather than being angrily discarded in the Taft manner, be held in reserve as a reluctant last-ditch weapon in the fight on high prices. It is interesting that this program is much like that proposed by the middle-of-the-roaders among the President's advisers, who were finally overruled by the President when he decided to go the whole hog for rationing and price control.

The brewing Republican rebellion may yet be squashed. Yet it is at least heartening that a number of Senate Republicans see more in the price problem than a chance to hurl Truman's silly remark about "police state methods" back in his face. And it is also heartening that a reasonable compromise on the issue between the Administration and the Congress is at least not beyond the bounds of possibility.

Spirit of '76 Still First in Hearts of Nation . . .



THEY MADE A HIT WITH THE PEOPLE—A poll conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion shows the most popular event in the "hit parade" of American history to be the signing of the Declaration of Independence, portrayed here in the famous painting by James Trumble. The artist, commissioned by Congress in 1817, to do the painting, depicted John Hancock (seated at the table), president of the Continental Congress, receiving the Declaration from Thomas Jefferson, Hancock was the first to sign. Facing Hancock in front of the table are (from left) John Adams, Roger Sherman, Robert Livingston, Jefferson, and Benjamin Franklin, all members of the committee which drafted the Declaration.

Democratic Hopes In Chicago

CHICAGO.—The tradition in American politics is that the President in office in a period of prosperity usually gets re-elected. Time after time the Republicans invoked the full dinner pail in order to stay in power.

CHILDS

If that tradition holds and the present high level of prosperity continues, then President Truman should have little trouble in being reelected next year. Quite clearly, of course, the opposite is true. In spite of his continuing upward climb in the public opinion polls, President Truman is rated as the long shot in the presidential sweepstakes.

Part of this is put down to the fact of a party so long in power with an accumulation of conflicts and damaging public squabbles. Part of it seems to be based on the assumption that the voters tend to desert the Democrats in good times and revert to Republicanism.

But even a little time out in the country, away from the hothouse atmosphere of Washington, makes it evident that Mr. Truman cannot be written off. In any event, he cannot be written off at this early date. The decision is still in the making and certain things are happening out here which can mean a lot of difference.

THE POPULARITY of Chicago's reform mayor, Martin Kennelly, has changed the political picture in Illinois. Kennelly, a successful businessman who came up the hard way, has proved to be an able administrator. The fact that he is a Democrat was, in a sense, incidental to his election. But that fact has helped to restore the party's waning prestige.

Much of the credit for selecting Kennelly and persuading "Boss" Ed Kelly to stand aside is given to Col. Jacob M. Arvey, a rising powerhouse in the Democratic organization in Chicago. Arvey and his friends are now evolving some important plans for 1948.

They are trying to settle on a suitable candidate to oppose Illinois' Senator C. Wayland Brooks, who about 90 per cent of the time follows the strict party line of the Chicago Tribune. Two men are under consideration who stand for exactly the opposite of what Brooks and the Tribune stand for.

One is Prof. Paul H. Douglas of the University of Chicago and the other is Adlai Stevenson, who has been a crusader for the United Nations and world cooperation. Douglas, who is considered the probable choice, enlisted as a private in the Marine Corps after Pearl Harbor even though he was beyond draft age. He saw a lot of combat in the Pacific and received wounds that required a long convalescence.

Douglas is a liberal who is also a strong advocate of American responsibility in world affairs. His brilliant war record would certainly do him no harm as a candidate.

THE SELECTION of such a candidate on the Democratic ticket would have national repercussions. It would sharpen the issue between isolationism of the America First, head-in-the-sand variety and cooperation for world recovery such as most leading Republicans, as well as Democrats, have advocated. The Republican choice for the presidential race might be put in the embarrassing position of having to repudiate or ignore Brooks.

If present plans go through, the Democratic candidate for Governor will be Senator Scott Lucas. Lucas would give the present Republican Governor, Dwight Green, a hot race. Green has not been popular in the State, and the Centralia (Ill.) mine disaster, for which the State received a large share of the blame, did not increase the regard for him.

These signs of a break from the old order of machine politics are symptomatic. The big test for the Democrats, however, is in the degree of support which can be counted on from labor.

If the major issue is high prices, with the Taft-Hartley Act as a kind of sideshow, then labor might really be stirred up to turn out the vote. Organized labor was able to do that in the industrial centers in 1944 and thereby greatly influence what was in actuality a close election.

In the congressional elections a year ago, labor stayed home. One reason was the split in labor's own ranks produced by divisive Communist elements. A determined effort is being made to remove those elements—and with no little success, as the victory of Walter Reuther at the United Auto Workers Convention demonstrated.

The Democrats have an advantage in that they know who their man will be. Not until the Republicans bet down to deciding on a candidate will the nature of the contest be clear. But one thing is certain—at this stage of the game, victory is not in the bag, as some complacent Republicans have seemed to take for granted.

Religious Training in Public School Released Time Opposed

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 28 (Spl.).—Church leaders were urged to oppose "released time" religious instruction in public schools in an address delivered here tonight by Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the chairman of the board of The Washington Post, at the annual convention of the Texas State Teachers Association.

"The school system is the one broad area left in our country where religious intolerance could be overcome," said Mrs. Meyer. "It is the one place where the child is not yet primarily a Protestant, a Catholic or a Jew, but an American among Americans."

The remedy for "a waning Christian fervor," she told the educators, "is not more sectarianism in the public schools but more heart, more persuasive intelligence and more religion in the churches."

As an alternative to "released time," Mrs. Meyer urged "dismissed time" and gave as one example, the French system, under which children are given a half day off in midweek, at which time they may avail themselves of religious instruction.

Disadvantages Cited

"Released time" training, under which clergymen enter the school room or school children are sent from the class room for a period of denominational instruction, was condemned as a violation of "separation of state and church" principles of American democracy. Its practical disadvantages and its inadequacy in meeting a grave problem were cited.

Stressing the danger risked by the churches in efforts to gain public aid for religion, Mrs. Meyer warned that they "are sacrificing their own freedom, their prestige and their influence on the lives of our people, if they depend more and more upon public support and let themselves become mere adjuncts or dangerous rivals of the state."

Protestant and Catholic clerics alike were blamed for "battering down the school doors in order to get a hearing from children." She asked that sectarian religious instruction be kept within "the province of the church, the family and the home."

Divides Children

Released time religious instruction was blamed for disturbing friendly relations among school children and charged with confusing their parents. Increased divisiveness among our people resulted from the lining up of students by religious denomination, she said.

Mrs. Meyer appealed to the Christian churches "to have a tolerant attitude toward each other" and voiced distress at the "undignified quarrels of the clergy" which she attributed to "rival ambitions, mutual intolerance and lack of confidence in the power of spirit, mind and idea." Repercussions of these church dissensions, she contended, "are already felt in the nation's school rooms."

Church leaders were counseled not to "disrupt the unifying social mission of our public school system" as Mrs. Meyer praised the moral leadership of public school administrators in urban areas beset with grave social problems of wartime.

Protestant Church leaders were reminded of their historic role as a chief protector of the public schools. They were urged to take the lead in asking State Legislatures to repeal statutes making released time instruction optional or mandatory. Catholic Church leaders were supported in their efforts to gain for parochial school students their legitimate rights to public services, but to obtain these services they must make it clear that they support separation of church and state. They were advised to accept the reasoning of Justices Black and Rutledge in the New Jersey bus case in which they emphasized the constitutional provision that "no tax in any amount, large or small, can be levied to support any religious activities or institutions."

Attacks Are Condemned

Attacks on public schools as "godless" or "communistic" were condemned. The American Council on Education was also criticized for demanding that religious instruction permeate every subject taught in public schools. Mrs. Meyer warned of the tendency of nondenominational religious instruction to become that of a dominating local sect.

Difficulties of making an equitable distribution of public funds among different religious denominations were emphasized by Mrs. Meyer, who criticized support for such a policy by Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr of Union Theological Seminary. She expressed doubt that it would be feasible to attempt a division of public funds among 256 different sects. She characterized the proposal as "Irresolute Protestant thinking which confuses the whole issue of church and state."

Envisioning the struggle over religious instruction in the public schools as a threat to "the very fate of the Nation," Mrs. Meyer gave local instances to prove that "sectarian schism" might destroy the school system. She felt it imperative that some method be devised at once by which "the growing domination of the public schools by sectarian religions can be arrested and eliminated."

Hailing the churches in their proper role as "a powerful leaven" that could "bring about the reconciliation of the city of man with the city of God," Mrs. Meyer enjoined them to accept their place "as the ally rather than the dictator of our democratic morality."

The Gallup Poll

Signing of Declaration Rates As Top Event in U. S. History

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 28.—If the average American could have witnessed any historical moment in his country's past, there would have been no "box-office stampede" to any one event.

The only one which comes close to capturing the imagination of a large group of voters is the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

With interest in national history spurred by the Freedom Train's tour, the institute asked this question of a representative cross-section of adults:

"If you could have been present and seen any one event in the whole history of the United States—which event would you like to have seen?"

The responses show not only a wide variety of interests, but also a broad interpretation as to what constitutes history. Among the events listed are the 33-33 slugfest tie played by Yale and Dartmouth in 1931 and Alexander's striking out Lazzerie in the final game of the World Series of 1926.

Six out of ten of the voters questioned in the poll had a ready answer; the responses follow:

Signing of the Declaration of Independence (1776)	13%
Lincoln delivering his address at Gettysburg (1863)	4%
Japanese surrender aboard the Missouri (1945)	4%
Explosion of the atom bomb—Hiroshima (1945)	3%
Landing of the Pilgrims (1620)	2%
Signing of the Emancipation Proclamation (1863)	2%
The Constitutional Convention (1787)	2%
Civil War	1%
Any of F. D. R.'s inaugurals	1%
Mis ellaneous	25%
Don't know	18%
"Couldn't select just one"	23%

Among the miscellaneous answers, none of which were given by as much as 1 per cent of the population, were:

Washington as President and at Valley Forge.

"First raising of the Stars and Stripes," flown by American lines besieging Boston on January 1, 1776.

Flaging raising on Mount Suribachi, Iwo Jima (1945).

Landing of Ponce de Leon in Florida (1513).

Battle of the Alamo (1836).

Boston Massacre (1770).

Daniel Webster's reply to Senator Robert Hayne (1830).

F. D. R.'s speech before Congress requesting declaration of war (1941).

Gas Plant Intended for Reds To Be Sold by WAA as Surplus

By The Associated Press

The State Department said yesterday an estimated seven million dollars worth of gasoline cracking plant equipment, originally intended for shipment to Russia, is in the process of being turned over to the War Assets Administration for disposal as surplus.

The equipment, it said, will be given to War Assets within a month.

George Truesdell, of the lend-lease division, said the equipment originally was scheduled for shipment to Russia to expand the capacity of plants sent the Soviet Union during the war under lend-lease.

It was not shipped before the December 31, 1946, deadline for lend-lease shipments and has remained in this country.

Truesdell said that he understands that "no complete plant is involved," but "engineers now are inventoring and appraising the thousands of pieces of equipment."

WAA Bars Electronics Sales to Yugoslavia

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—Jess Larson, Chickasha, Okla., attorney who has been named acting head of the War Assets Administration by President Truman, said today that the WAA "will not sell electronics to Yugoslavia."

Larson, successor to Gen. Robert M. Littlejohn as WAA administrator, told newsmen at a conference in the agency's New York office that some items in the 28-billion-dollar war surplus inventory purchased by American firms may have been resold to Yugoslavia.

"But," he added, "such resales are limited by the State and Commerce Departments."

Last November 6, the American Committee for Yugoslav Relief said a shipment of radio and radar parts purchased from war surplus by the Washington Yugoslav Embassy had been shipped on the Yugoslav freighter Radnick October 25.

Customs officials said at the time that four crates of radar equipment and 26 cases of radio parts were sent out under consignment to the Yugoslav Red Cross.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—Cotton futures advanced into new seasonal high ground in broad trading today and closed $2.35 to $2.70 a bale higher after reaching a temporary advance of $4 a bale. Mills were active buyers. Purchases of several large blocks credited to mill account, were believed to be for tax purposes.

One private opinion, freely circulated in the trade, that the 1947 crop may be lower than 11 million bales against the last Government forecast of 11,505,000 bales, stimulated considerable buying. A crop of that size, dealers felt, would mean a tighter supply situation than occurred last season.

College to Translate Writings

Philadelphia, Nov. 28 (AP).—Dropsie College announced today a $100,000 ancient scripture translation project which it described as "the most ambitious Jewish scholarly undertaking of our time."

President Dr. Abraham A. Neuman said the college within the next 10 years will translate and publish 30 volumes of scriptural writings between the close of the Old Testament and the dawn of Christianity.

The writings are non-Biblical scriptures known as the Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha.

The Apocrypha, Dr. Neuman explained, is a group of books similar in nature or content to the Biblical writings. They were rejected, however, by Jews as sacred literature because they were known to have been written after the time of Ezra, after which, according to Jewish tradition, the spirit ceased in Israel.

The Pseudepigrapha were written between 200 B. C. and 200 A. D. They deal with life after death, the Messiah, immortality of the soul, heaven and the fate of the righteous. The books were banned by the rabbis, said Dr. Neuman, as tending to lead to religious sectarianism.

The translation project will be undertaken by a special board of editors consisting of leading Semitic scholars from Harvard, the University of Chicago, the Hebrew Union College and the Jewish Theological Seminary of America as well as members of the faculty of Dropsie College, a post-graduate school specializing in the whole range of Hebrew and Judiasm.

Clerical Foe Of Talmadge Speaks Here

The Georgia minister who lost his pulpit because he defied the late Governor Herman Talmadge last night charged America with a "drunkenness over racism, communism witch-hunts and materialism."

The Rev. Joseph A. Rabun of Valdosta, Ga., a self-styled "evangelist for Christian democracy," addressed a meeting of the National Fraternal Council of Negro Churches in America and the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance.

Speaking at Metropolitan Baptist Church, 1225 R st. nw., Rabun said "America is getting drunk over its material power instead of using its material resources to strengthen our Christianity and our democracy."

Rabun was appointed pastor of the First Baptist Church of McRae, Ga., in October, 1946, after serving four years as Navy chaplain. The Talmadge family attended that church and on February 9, 1947, the pastor offered to resign because of his opposition to pending "white supremacy" legislation. Last August 3, the First Baptist congregation voted 67-35 to request his resignation.

Rabun is staying for several days with a brother, Edwin D. Rabun, a Government worker, at 5904 9th st. nw. The clergyman told a reporter last night that he felt that "white supremacy was again being made a campaign issue in the South."

Religious Tolerance Grows, Poll of 4500 Clergy Reveals

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

While the American people, as a whole, have not been made more deeply religious as a result of the war, greater understanding and tolerance are growing between persons of different faiths.

That is the finding of a survey made by the Columbia Broadcasting Company's "Guiding Light" author, Irna Phillips, who polled 4500 clergymen affiliated with the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

The "Guiding Light" serial's principal character is a minister who has, during the program's decade on the air, dealt with a wide variety of social problems common to every community. History is repeating itself, the polled clergymen believe, in a postwar decadence in morals and manners.

MEMO TO LABOR SECRETARY SCHWELLENBACH

Your embarrassment in getting the same address as Isadore Lubin, UN economic adviser, to deliver at a meeting recalls a classic bit of Jewish folklore.

An elderly and a young rabbi were competing for a position in the synagogue of a European village.

The evening before the congregational meeting, the elderly rabbi stood in his bedroom, arduously rehearsing the speech, while the younger rabbi stood on the ground outside the house, jotting down every word of the speech.

As the congregational meeting opened, the younger rabbi was asked to speak first, repeating the competitor's talk in toto and receiving great applause.

The elder rabbi arose to declare "that the younger rabbi's speech was so good that I would like to repeat it, word for word."

When he had finished his address, the congregation, amazed at the brilliance of a man who could repeat another's speech word for word, awarded him the rabbinical position.

PRIEST WRITES CHRISTMAS BOOK

Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, Catholic University professor and radio orator, has written a book entitled "Jesus, Son of Mary," especially for children and adapted to the Christmas season. It was published last Wednesday by Declan X. McMullen Co., Inc., New York.

GERMAN CHURCHMAN COMING HERE

The trip will be sponsored by the United States National Committee for the Lutheran World Federation. He will visit the Gettysburg (Pa.) Theological Seminary December 8-10.

TRINITY LAUNCHING DEBT-CLEARANCE DRIVE

Trinity Methodist Church, 2911 Cameron Mills rd., Alexandria, founded in 1774, has launched a drive to liquidate its $20,000 debt and also to raise $75,000 to construct a wing on its present building. Mother of Methodism in Alexandria, the church is now served by the Rev. John F. Owens.

MR. HARP SENDS GREETINGS

While in Richmond, Va., this week, your reporter had a chat with the Rev. Reno S. Harp, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church and formerly rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Piney Branch rd. and Dahlia st. nw. Mr. Harp, who was chairman of the Diocesan Department of Missions for several years, asked to be remembered to his many friends here.

"I HAVE SEEN THEIR FACES . . ."

"These people here are slowly but surely starving to death—everyone, not just a few."

That is the view of Mrs. E. P. Hoagland, Arlington woman who recently arrived in Germany, and expressed in a letter to friends at the Pershing Drive Christian Church. Mrs. Hoagland and her four children recently joined her husband, an Army captain in Germany.

"I . . . have seen their faces," she wrote, "the blank, helpless, hopeless expression that is terrible. They are all hungry, with nothing to live for—the Americans are their last hope. We say they started the war and that is true, but this mass of people was carried on by the Nazi current, and now they are helpless, homeless and without food or clothing, and the food situation is getting worse."

Four Colleges To Have Part In Service

Officers and alumni and students of four Episcopal church-sponsored colleges will participate in a service at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Washington Cathedral.

They will represent Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y.; Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.; Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio, and the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.

Marking the first such service in the history of the Cathedral and the four cooperating institutions, the order of worship has been planned to emphasize the special contributions which a church college can make to secular education.

The sermon will be delivered by the Very Rev. Robert McC. Hatch, dean of the Cathedral Church of St. John, Wilmington, Del. Portions of the services will be conducted by George Keith Funston, president of Trinity; Gordon Keith Chalmers, president of Kenyon; Walter H. Durfee, acting president and dean of Hobart, and the Rev. Early W. Poindexter, chaplain of the University of the South.

Canonization To Be Noted

The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, D. D., Administrator of the Baltimore and Washington archdioceses, will preside at a solemn celebration in honor of the recent canonization of St. Catherine Laboure at the 12:15 o'clock mass tomorrow at Immaculate Conception Church.

The Very Rev. Francis J. Dodd, C. M., Provincial of the Sisters of Charity, will preach. The celebrant will be the Rev. Joseph E. Gedra; Deacon, Rev. Joseph T. Lilly, C. M., professor of sacred scripture at Catholic University; and subdeacon Rev. Thomas D. O'Connor, C. M., pastor of the Immaculate Conception Church, Baltimore, Maryland.

All the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul in Washington together with the parish will join in the observance of this occasion. The Daughters of Charity conduct Providence Hospital, St. Ann's Orphanage, Soldiers Home Hospital, St. Vincent's Home for Girls and the Immaculate Conception Academy.

Church Opens New Building for Activities

Clay-modeling at new community center at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 9th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., are, left to right: Ronald Yee, 9, of 930 New York ave. nw.; Ralph Green, 11, of 941 K st. nw., and Jimmy Wiggins, 5, of 939 K st. nw

Youngsters in the neighborhood of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw., can now claim not just one joint playroom, but a four-story building as their own.

The new Activities Building at 935 K st. nw., adjoining the church, is the result of a five-year search for a place to house youthful activities.

Mrs. James D. Ford, the church's director of social welfare, is in charge of the building.

The basement houses the boys' room, where "active" games are played. The first floor, which includes an assembly room, is devoted to movies, cooking classes and church services, she explained.

There is a library on the second floor, where story hours will be held at 4 p. m. Monday through Saturday, while on the top floor are facilities for "quiet games," such as checkers.

There are also scheduled periods for workshops for boys, dramatics, gymnastics, sewing classes, and a teen-age canteen with weekly dancing, Mrs. Ford said.

The hours are: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday, 3:30 p. m. to 6, and 7 p. m. to 9:30; Thursday, 3:30 p. m. to 6 and 7 p. m. to 10, and Saturday, 9:45 a. m. to noon. The building will be closed on Sunday.

Former Chaplain To Lead Series

The Rev. Arthur Finan, until recently a Navy chaplain, will make a series of talks at St. Stephen's Catholic Church, 25th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., tomorrow through December 8. There will be services daily at 5:20 p. m. and 7:45 p. m., and masses daily at 6:30 a. m. and 7:30 a. m.

Two Baptist Congregations Planning Ground Breakings

Ground-breaking ceremonies for two Baptist buildings will be among activities of greater Washinton area churches tomorrow.

Members of Chevy Chase Baptist Church, Western ave. near Chevy Chase Circle, will break ground for a new church at 3:30 p. m. The congregation of Bon Air Baptist Church, will hold their ground-breaking rites at 3 p. m. for their educational building at Wilson blvd. and North Illinois st., Arlington.

Dr. Jesse R. Wilson, of New York City, home secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, and Representative Clifford Davis of Tennessee will speak at Chevy Chase ceremony. Also participating will be the Rev. J. David Clark of Towson, Md., father of the Rev. Edward R. Clark, pastor of Chevy Chase Baptist Church, who will preside. The ground-breaking will climax a building program begun in 1939 and held in abeyence during the war years.

The Rev. U. S. Knox, pastor, will conduct the exercises of the Bon Air congregation, which is now worshiping at Jefferson and Kensington sts. When the proposed educational building is completed, the congregation will use it for both church and Sunday school services until a church is built. Among participants in the service will be Dr. James P. Gully, pastor of Del Ray Baptist Church and moderator of the Potomac Baptist Association.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—All week long the theme of Coach Earl Blaik's pep talks to his Army football players has been an appeal to their pride. This is Army's chance, he has been saying, to prove that it can beat Navy without Blanchard, Davis and Tucker. For Blaik it's a handy psychological weapon to sharpen the Cadets for the only game that really counts with 'em.

POVICH

Otherwise, the high incentive is on Navy's side. Three long years under the heel of West Point have given Coach Tom Hamilton of Navy the ammunition to fire up his Navy lads for their top effort. It's Navy's chance to get even for past indignities.

The pregame statements of the coaches have been fairly typical. Coach Blaik, always the tacit conservative, ventures nothing except the prediction that it will be a close game and that the stadium will be filled. Coach Hamilton, always attempting to inspire his team, flat-footedly predicts a Navy victory in the face of the odds favoring Army by a touchdown, and has said moreover, "We'll knock their ears off."

BUT THE GAME won't be won from the coaches' chairs on the sidelines. The return of Pete Williams to the Navy lineup, and the Army's ability to shake Rip Rowan loose will have far more effect on the final score. Army has already earned the respect of the Nation's football fans. The Cadets didn't fold after losing Blanchard, Davis and Tucker by graduation. They tied Illinois and Penn, and won four other games, and only Notre Dame and Columbia could lick 'em.

Notre Dame and Penn were the only common opponents of Army and Navy this season, and in each case it was Army showing to better advantage than the Middies. Rowan, who was just a name in the All-America backfield of the Cadets last season, was a hot article against the Irish, and Navy has concentrated its defenses toward stopping him tomorrow. He's the fastest-breaking fullback on any college team.

In a season when Army lacks an overpowering backfield, Blaik has come up with a tremendous line, with the help of Line Coach Herman Hickman, and Navy faces a different task this year. Last season it was stopping Army's backs. Tomorrow, the Middies must face a superior Army line, with Joe Steffy at guard, and Gobel Bryant at tackle, rated the finest in the East at their positions.

THE RETURN OF Pete Williams to the backfield after recovering from injuries that have kept him idle during most of the season is a particular boon to Navy. Not only does the speedy Williams relieve Bill Hawkins of the brunt of Navy's running game and offer the Middies more diversification, but he is one of Hamilton's most inspired performers as a rule.

It was Williams who last year against Army set the pace for Navy's gallant comeback in the second half with his pass interceptions and tremendous defensive play in the secondary. If Navy took the field with any awe of Army, it vanished with the exploits of Williams. Hamilton has fired Navy to such a pitch, incidentally, that one supporter of the underdog Midshipmen today ventured, "I hope we're not overconfident."

Off last year's game, the paradox is that Navy is not the favorite. The Middies, who held Army to a 21-18 score in a year when the Cadets had Blanchard, Davis and Tucker, are the underdogs nevertheless, and despite the fact that they have 16 lettermen in their lineup. Army has only eight veterans of that 1946 game available.

THE FANS WHO can take their eyes off the ball carriers tomorrow will probably feast on one of the better defensive duels of the season. Navy's center, Dick Scott, will be pitted against Bill Yeoman of Army. All season long, Scott has been acclaimed as All-America timber, and deservedly, but never in his life did he have a better day than did Yeoman against Notre Dame.

For Navy fans, an interesting point is that Reaves Baysinger, whose quarterbacking of the Middies last year rivaled that of Arnold Tucker for the Army, is not even the starting quarterback of the Navy tomorrow. That role has been usurped by Bob Horne, who has come off the bench since midseason and made Navy's attack move better than Baysinger did at any point this year.

My feeling is that Navy, at its best, can beat Army by a couple of touchdowns tomorrow. But that is barring the habitual fumbling habits of the Midshipmen. I'm positive of nothing, when Army and Navy meet.

Army Rated Touchdown Choice Over Navy Today

By Bob Considine

Philadelphia, Nov. 28 (INS).—What is left of Army's incomparable wartime football team collides with grimly determined Navy here tomorrow before 102,000 spectators and a world-wide reading and listening audience.

Still seething from the blow of just failing to upset Blanchard, Davis and Company a year ago, the Midshipmen's coach, Capt. Tom Hamilton, today boldly predicted a victory for his side.

His opinion will be opposed tomorrow by more than half of the gigantic mob on hand and by those most astute football authorities, the Jersey bookmakers, who have ruled that Army is a 6-½ point favorite.

Navy, with only one football victory to its credit in two years (the Tars this year tied one, won one and lost six) hasn't beaten Army since 1943.

But it was of a mind tonight to declare last year's losing score of 21-18 a mockery, in view of the fact that it should have rammed over the winning touchdown when it gained a first down within the 10-yard line in the closing minute of the struggle.

Army Has Series Edge

Army won four games this year, lost to Columbia and Notre Dame, and tied two. In the long years of the service team rivalry, dating back to the decade which was colored mauve, Army has won 25, Navy 19, and 3 games have been tied.

Navy will field much the same team that almost upset Army's long wartime winning streak a year ago. Army, though hardly the team it was when Blanchard and Davis were operating, still is a very rugged outfit, admirably well schooled by Red Blaik and possessed of all the will-to-win that is effervescing in Navy.

It will be curtains for Army's great All-America guard, Joe Steffy, captain of the Cadets, and three other crack Army players—Rip Rowan, fullback; Goble Bryant, tackle, and Harvey Livesay, center.

Scott's Swan Song Too

This will be the end of the line, too, for Navy's All-America center and captain, Dick Scott, among other Navy regulars.

Rowan, Galiffa, Gustafson and Cosentino will bear the brunt of the Army ball-carrying and pitching. "Jigger" Gillette will be in there, too, and that better-than-average pigskin warrior with the notable name of Winfield Scott.

Navy's Reaves Baysinger, who almost single-handedly beat Army in the last quarter of the 1946 game, probably will be riding the bench at the start of the game.

But he'll be in there before it goes very far. So will "Pistol Pete" Williams, who broke a leg early in the year but would want to play tomorrow even if it were still in a cast—which it isn't.

Hawkins' Big Threat

Navy's chief offensive threat is expected to be Bill Hawkins, currently the fifth ranking ground-gainer in Eastern football. Big Bill has charged 493 yards in 108 tries. Navy's chief thrower is Bob Horne and he, of course, is from Texas—where most of the game's best throwers are bred.

Thompson, Gray Pace McKinley To Victory

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Mixing power with deceptive ball handling, in an inspired third quarter rally, Cece Gray and Robert (Bugs) Thompson paced McKinley Tech's Trainers to a 14-7 victory over Central's gallant Vikings at Griffith Stadium and thereby won their first Interhigh championship since 1936.

More than 18,000 fans, including 16,328, who paid their way into the ball park, were treated to big league ball-handling and vicious tackling by both teams.

By winning last night, Tech evened its 45-year-old series with traditional rival, Central, at 20 all. Seven games have resulted in ties. It was the nineteenth grid championship to be won by Tech since it began interhigh competition in 1902.

FIRST QUARTER

Tech received the kickoff, but couldn't gain. After two punt exchanges, Central launched a scoring drive from its own 48. With Ross Keith hitting the tackles and Dale Leathery and Jimmy Pantos smacking the guards, the Vikings drove to the Tech two. Leathery scored the first Interhigh touchdown against Tech this season by pounding through his own right guard. Billy Denikos converted to give Central a 7-0 lead.

SECOND QUARTER

The second quarter started with Central in possession, but when the Vikings couldn't move beyond their 29, Pantos punted. A kicking duel ensued between Tech's Bill Rogers and Central's Pantos with Rogers getting the better of it. Midway in the quarter, Rogers got off a 39-yard boot that went out of bounds on the Central nine, and thereafter the Vikings remained deep in their own territory. A holding penalty against Central pushed the Vikings to their own one. Ross Keith took over the Central punting assignment, and kicked out to Central's 48 where Thompson, behind superb blocking by Flea Fletcher and Buck Bernstein, raced to the Viking 27. Fletcher skirted left end to the 20, and Thompson picked up a first down through tackle to the 14. A Thompson to Cecil Gray pass moved the ball to the nine, but a fourth down pass from Thompson fell out of Fletcher's reach on the goal line, and Central took over on its own nine. The quarter ended with Central in possession still leading, 7-0.

THIRD QUARTER

Central received the kickoff, but after it could gain only 5 yards to the Viking 44 in three plays, Pantos kicked, Tech's End Jim McCauley partially blocked it and the ball went out of bounds on the Tech 48.

On the next six plays, Gray picked up 31 yards and Thompson 20, the ball moving to the Central one. Gray bulled through the middle to score. Eddie Herbert's perfect placement tied the score at 7-all.

Another Pantos kick, partially blocked again, this time by Tech's tackle Julius Poms again set the trainer scoring machine in motion on the central 31. On the next play, Thompson ripped through his own right tackle, cut toward the right sideline, and twisting away from a Central would-be tackler on the 5, he stumbled into the end zone to put Tech ahead 13-7. Herbert converted to make it 14-7 as the quarter ended.

N. C. State Final Test for Terps

Tech Favored Over Georgia

Atlanta, Nov. 28 (AP).—Perfect weather for the Georgia-Georgia Tech game tomorrow was predicted on the eve of the annual battle in which the host Yellow Jackets are rated as a slight favorite.

Both coaches—Wally Butts for Georgia, and Bobby Dodd—disclaim the favorite's role and decline to predict the outcome. Both are just as emphatic that their clubs are in excellent spirits and ready to perform before a capacity crowd of 37,000.

The visiting Bulldogs, victorious the past two years against Tech, are riding a four-game winning streak with a record of 7-3-0. The Jackets have an 8-1-0 record with a 14-7 loss to Alabama's Sugar Bowl team the only blemish.

Georgia lost to Alabama, 17-7, beat Auburn 28-6 and Furman 13-7. Tech beat Auburn by practically the same margin, 27-7, and swamped Furman, 51-0, after the visiting team had suffered injuries to five starting players.

The game shapes up as a close affair featuring passing by Georgia, and running by Tech, with each of them countering with a fair offensive in which the other sparkles. Johnny Rauch, Georgia's stellar passer, will find competition in Jim Southard and Jim Still, Tech's "T" quarterbacks, and others who occasionally throw the ball.

In the rushing offense, Tech's Bob McCoy, the Chattanooga cannonball, is expected to be the brightest star, with Dinky Bowen, Frank Ziegler, Red Patton and Jim Petit aiding.

Georgia's running attack is sparked by Billy Henderson, Eli Maricich and Lukie Brunson, with Floyd Reid and Joe Geri doing the line plunging.

Physically, both squads are reported to be in better shape than at any time during the past six weeks.

Maryland's 'Gator Bowl Bid Hinges On Outcome Today at College Park

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

An invitation to the Jacksonville (Flo.) 'Gator Bowl and the most successful football season in 10 years depend on a Maryland victory over North Carolina State this afternoon at College Park.

Kickoff time is 2 p. m. and a capacity crowd of 14,000 will be in the stands for the finale for both clubs.

All week long Old Liner coaches have brushed aside talk of bowl games while readying their squad for what they hope will be the eighth success of an already tremendous season.

School officials, however, are expected to make any announcement of their postseason plans, if any, immediately following the game. A representative of the 'Gator Bowl will be on hand.

A win over the resurgent Wolfpack would give the Terps a season's mark of eight triumphs and two defeats, the same record boasted by the 1937 team.

The single-winging Staters have bounced back with vim following their rout three weeks ago by North Carolina. They upset Wake Forest and hit the peak of their comeback last Saturday in Charlottesville, Va., when they tripped Virginia, 7-2.

There has been no inclination on the part of either Terp coaches or players to underestimate the ability of the Wolfpack. The visitors feature the finest punter in the Nation in Fullback Les Palmer whose 44.3 yards per try average outdistances the rest of the country's kickers.

Defensively, the Wolfpack has allowed only 92 points in eight games, 41 by North Carolina, and also has the country's second best pass defense record.

Heading into their last game of the year, the 'Pack has won five games and dropped three. One of their defeats was a 7-0 loss to Duke, the club that laced Maryland, 19-7.

Despite this basis of comparison, the Terps have been installed six-point favorites.

The Terps can be counted on to give it everything today. All the boys were reported in fine fettle with Coach Jim Tatum the only casualty. Tatum pulled his sacro-illiac in Nashville last Saturday and hasn't completely recovered.

But All-Southern Halfback Lu Gambino, Quarterback Vic Turyn, Center Gene Kinney and the rest of the gang are ready to go.

Gambino and Halfback Sammy Behr captain the Terps today. It will be the last regular season game for Behr, a senior from Orlando, Fla. He's the only player who won't be back next season.

The probable lineups:

Maryland		N. C. State
Simler	L. E.	Stanton
Krouse	L. T.	Dostanko
Phillips	L. G.	Wagoner
Kinney	Center	Saunders
Schwarz	R. G.	Musser

Evans	R. E.	Phillips
Turym	Q. B.	Bowlby
LaRue	L. H.	Richkus
Gambino	R. H.	Bozeman
Bonk	F. B.	Palmer

Kickoff—2 P. M. (EST).

Lions Lose Again, 4-1

The Providence Reds gained the American Hockey League's Eastern division lead last night as they defeated the Washington Lions for the second consecutive night in a hard fought match at Uline Arena, 4-1.

Some 1900 fans saw Harvey "Red" Raney, the Lions' hard working winger, prevent a shutout for providence's Harvey Bennett at 16:36 of the final period when he skated in fast to cage twin passes from Don Slater and John Carr-Harris.

Harvey Fraser, of the Reds, had fired his team's fourth conversion of the night at 16:21 as Carl Liscombe and Roger Bedar assisted.

The Lions muffed repeated opportunities to score by overseating and having their passing game broken up by an alert Providence defense. Meanwhile, some heroic work in the nets by Bell prevented further scoring by the visitors.

Truman, Army, Navy Officers Will Be Just 'Fans' at Game

Philadelphia, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Philadelphia became the football capital today as Municipal Stadium workers and concessionaires, hotels and railroads braced for the influx of some 102,000 persons for the Army-Navy game.

There will be 40 special trains to Municipal Stadium tomorrow, bringing 30,000 persons—including President Truman—to the game.

Most hotels reported no vacancies for the weekend as the vanguard of the fans, including numerous celebrities and Army and Navy brass, swelled the reservation lists.

The registration list at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel alone includes 18 generals and two admirals.

Activity in and around the huge horseshoe of Municipal Stadium, which seats about 102,000, mounted to a climax with 350 workers putting in the final touches.

A crew of 60 has reported daily since November 3 to take care of such items as repairing or replacing broken steps or seats and other odds and ends.

The concessionaires expected a busy day with the weatherman forecasting clear and crisp temperature in the middle forties. There will be some 8 miles of hot dogs, thousands of containers of coffee as well as soft drinks, pennants and the usual miscellany.

Assistant Superintendent of Police Guy Parsons declared that a detail of 700 policemen will keep traffic moving down Broad st. Eight lanes of traffic will be routed southbound toward the stadium before the game and northbound after the contest.

The presidential box, consisting of a platform with 114 folding chairs, was completed Wednesday. It is located on the Army side on the 50-yard line.

The President will occupy the seat throughout since Army is the host team this year. In previous games, the President has moved from one side to the other at halftime.

Baugh Entrains With Redskins After Car Accident

A slightly stiff neck was Sammy Baugh's only reminder of a Thanksgiving Day accident last night as the Washington Redskins entrained for their Sunday clash with the Boston Yankees.

The Slinger's brand-new auto, however, was undergoing several hundred dollars' worth of repairs as the result of a plunge off the Baltimore blvd.

Baugh was declared quite able to play against the fast-charging Yanks, 21-14 victors over the Philadelphia Eagles last outing. His neck, along with George Wilde's sore foot and Henry Harris' damaged ankle, were the only injuries on the 34-man squad Coach Turk Edwards led to Beantown.

Armed Named Horse of Year

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—Despite the fact that he was dethroned by Stymie as the world's leading money - winning thoroughbred, Calumet Farm's golden gelding Armed has been voted "Horse of the Year" in the first of two major polls among turf experts.

Of a total of 28 ballots cast by staff members of the Triangle Racing Publications, 25 went to the Calumet champion. Two voted for Assault, last season's choice, while Stymie was named on only one ballot.

Last year's poll crowned Armed chief of the handicap division, and he again leads in that category this time.

Another star of the Warren Wright Stable, the brilliant colt Citation, took the divisional title of best 2-year-old of either sex. The only dissenting vote went to still another Calumet candidate, Bewitch, which was an easy winner of the best 2-year-old filly award.

King Ranch's But Why Not was easily the choice among the 3-year-old fillies. C. V. Whitney's Phalanx was narrowly nominated over Fervent as the best 3-year-old and as the best colt in his age division. But Why Not again emerged on top in the handicap division for fillies and mares, shading Gallorette by one vote.

Undefeated Kansas and Georgia Tech Named to Play in Miami's Orange Bowl

MIAMI, FLA., Nov. 28 (AP).—Georgia Tech has been selected to oppose the University of Kansas in the Orange Bowl here New Year's Day.

Announcement that Tech—beaten only one in nine games—came only a few hours after the Orange Bowl Committee announced that the Kansas Jayhawkers would appear in the 14th annual New Years Day classic.

Kansas has won seven games and tied two. The Jayhawks meet Arizona today at Tucson in their final regular season contest.

Tech's only loss was a 14 to 7 beating by powerful Alabama.

It will mark the Ramblin' Wreck's third appearance in the Orange Bowl.

Orange Bowl president John G. Thompson said the bid was accepted by Tech Head Coach Bobby Dodd by telephone about 5:30 p. m.

Thompson said the bid was made this afternoon, Dodd called his players together and a vote was taken. The vote was unanimous to accept, Thompson said.

Georgia Tech has piled up 213 points against 35 for nine opponents. They started the season by drubbing Tennessee, 27-0; Tulane, 20-0; VMI, 20-0; Auburn, 27-0; Citadel, 38-0; Navy 16-14; and they lost to Alabama, 14-7, and las week swamped Furman, 51-0.

They have the traditional Georgia game to play tomorrow in the regular season.

Tech has been a bowl team contender for the past two decades. In 1929 when they beat California 8-7 in the Rose Bowl, in 1940 they beat Missouri here in the Orange Bowl, in 1943 Texas beat them in the Cotton Bowl 14-7, next year in the Sugar Bowl they deadlocked with Tulsa (Okla.) 20-20, the next year Tulsa beat them 26-12 in the Orange Bowl and last year they swamped St. Mary's 41-19 in the Oil Bowl.

On the other bowl fronts: the University of Mississippi agreed to play T. C. U. in the Memphis Delta Bowl, while Catawba College of Salisbury, N. C., accepted an invitation to play in the Tangerine Bowl at Orlando, Fla.

Army-Navy Game

It's Payoff Day for Post Grid Winners

Today's payoff day for The Washington Post football contest winners. They cash in on that coveted all-expense trip to Philadelphia for the Army-Navy classic.

The lucky finalists of the seven-week competition that attracted nearly a quarter of a million entries will meet in the lobby of The Washington Post at 8:15 a. m.

They'll travel first-class by rail right to Municipal Stadium. After the game, the group will have a special dinner on the dining car en route home.

Each winner was entitled to bring one guest. Trygve Tuve, the boy wiza.d, ran his allotment to three guests when he won his second weekly contest.

The 14-year-old Chevy Chase lad generously invited two wounded servicemen to join the party. They are Army Corpl. Bernard Martin, of Walter Reed Hospital and Marine Corpl. Lewis Auriccihio of Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Opinion of the outcome of today's game found The Washington Post experts exactly divided.

Young Tuve, likes Navy, 14-13. Said Trygve, "Army's been down. I have faith in Navy and I'll be rooting for them.

William M. Kaiser, who won the second contest and was runnerup twice by a mere point, also likes the Middies. "I'll take Navy by 13 to 6," said Kaiser, "Navy has played better than Army against Notre Dame and Penn. Not only that, my dad was a 33-year Marine Corps veteran and I've always liked Navy."

Oddly, the Army supporters were more vehement. Harry J. Davis and Charles M. Gott both picked the Cadets to win by two touchdowns.

B. C. Favored Over Crusaders

11,000 Watch Master Bid Beaten Out

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 28.—Favorite players who have been doing well at the Bowie meeting, went down with a mighty thud today.

After Brookmeade Stable's Master Bid had been played and replayed into odds-on favoritism, the 4-year-old was forced to lower his colors to E. A. Nicodemus' Laran.

This 3-year-old was a going-away winner by 2½ lengths over the public choices. In third position came Mrs. J. D. S. Coleman's Boston Man.

Only six competed in the test labelled the Bel Air. Laran was second choice and returned a $8.40 mutuel, running over the fast mile and a sixteenth course in 1:45 3/5. The last Friday program of the 14-day session here drew a crowd of 11,000.

Laran Wins Stretch Duel

Master Bid seemed to have the situation well in hand in the early stages. Apprentice C. Martens rated him along and it was seemingly without effort that Master Bid disposed of Play High to open a good lead.

Laran, under Jockey Herb Claggett's handling, was under steadying restraint, however. Approaching the stretch, Martens had to go into a drive on Master Bid as Laran came to the outside.

In the stretch, Claggett shook up his mount and the son of Hairan responded to dispose of the tiring Master Bid. Boston Man beat tired horses to be third.

The victory was the fifth of the year for Loran. He picked up $2100 in earnings to bring his 1947 total to $12,825.

El Mono Takes Oxon

The day's secondary feature, the Oxon Hill, went to D. Lamortie's El Mono, the son of Heal Play, coming from last position in a field of 11 to win by three parts of a length. Brookmeade Stable's Music was second with Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Big Story third.

Music and Big Story battled each other most of the way. Jockey V. Nodarse, however, brought El Mono along on the inside rail. Big Story finally tired with Music going to the front. The Brookmeade hope could not handle the closing rush of El Mono.

The winner paid $7.40 and was clocked in the stake horse time of 1:11 2/5.

The 11-and-7 combination paid $58.60 in the daily double. J. M. Kane's Pompey's Hero won the first while strongly handled by Jockey W. Balzaretti. In the second, C. H. Lamparter's Royal Fleet downed a bunch of cattle including Stanley Greene's Walter Haight.

Singh on Rassle Show

Nanjo Singh, creator of the "Cobra Clutch," will meet Frederick Von Schacht, 6-foot-6 Chicagoan, in an added attraction on next Wednesday night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena. Mildred Burke, the recognized feminine champion, and Dot Dodson of Oklahoma City will clash in the feature bout.

Radio Rights Money Donated to Chest

Columbia Wholesalers, Inc., who yesterday purchased the radio rights over Station WINX for last night's interhigh Tech-Central championship game, sent the entire purchase price, $500, to the Community Chest and the interhigh athletic treasuries.

Radio personnel of WINX donated their services for the game and the station made no charge for the broadcast time.

Virginia and Tar Heels Meet Today for 51st Time in Series

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 28.—North Carolina and Virginia, both twice beaten and bowl-thwarted, meet here tomorrow in the fifty-second renewal of the South's oldest continuous football rivalry.

The announcement that Georgia Tech has been selected for the Orange Bowl means that tomorrow's disappointed contestants will try to salvage some satisfaction out of the season by knocking the other's brain out.

Last year, an overwhelming North Carolina victory at Charlottesville, resulted in a Sugar Bowl invitation.

In the long series the teams are surprisihgly close. Carolina has won 25, lost 23 and tied 3. In the past two decades, Virginia has won only twice. In 1941, the Cavaliers won, 28-7; in 1944, 26-7.

North Carolina, riding the crest of a six-game winning streak, goes into the game a two-touchdown favorite. The Tarheels attack has been in high gear the last five games.

Charlie Justice, Walt Pupa, Hosea Rogers and Jim Camp, the top backs, get plenty of help from Art Weiner and Bob Cox, as good a pair of ends on offense as there are.

Last week against Duke, Justice ran for the first touchdown, threw a pass for the second and received one for the third. Despite this versatile performance, the Carolina 21-0 victory wasn't a one-man show.

Camp made two nice runs to help set up scores, Cox was a sure pass-receiver and Weiner gave a successful demonstration of his prowess on end-around dashes. Hard-working Walt Pupa was much in evidence, too.

After rolling to six impressive triumphs, Virginia has bogged down in its last three starts. Pennsylvania knocked the Cavaliers out of the unbeaten ranks, 19 to 7. West Virginia held them to a 6-0 score and North Carolina State handed them a stunning 7-2 setback last week.

It's pertinent to point out that the same Wolfpack club took a 41-to-6 drubbing from the Tar Heels.

However, Art Guepe's Virginia squad is in top condition and on a fast field might regain its offensive spark. Bruce Bailey, Billy Pennel and Grover Jones, three fourths of the early season high-scoring backfield, are fit and ready. George Neff will be quarterback in place of Joe McCary, out with a broken hand.

Probable line-ups:

Virginia		North Carolina
Elliott	L. E.	Weiner
Steckmesser	L. T.	Fowle
Thomas	L. G.	Mitten
Prinzell	Center	Stiegman
Baumann	R. G.	Klosterman

High School Finds You Just Can't Win

Longview, Wash., Nov. 28 (AP).—Kelso High School's gridiron strategists were wondering today if a pass defense is worth the price.

With 30 seconds to go against neighboring Longview in their annual "big game" yesterday, and the score at 0 to 0 a Kelso defender leaped high to knock down a last-ditch pass. He deflected it straight into the arms of a Longview halfback, who was lying flat on his back in the end zone. Longview won, 7-0, for its fifteenth straight victory in two seasons.

Maryland Bars Two for Life in Saguaro Case

Baltimore, Nov. 28.—Two turfmen were ruled off State tracks for life and another was fined $50 today by the Maryland Racing Commission after a hearing in connection with the injury and resultant destruction of the horse Saguaro.

In addition to being banned from competition, the two barred for life also will be denied all privileges, which means they may not even visit a track.

Since Maryland has a working agreement with other tracks the rulings amount to a Nation-wide ban.

Maurice (Moose) Peters, Saguaro's trainer and a former nationally known jockey, and Frank Buehler, an owner, had their licenses revoked before being banned, and Dick Pending was fined $50 for failing to register the fact that Saguaro had been "nerved" with the commission in compliance wi thMrayland racing rules.

Buehler, it was alleged, fired a shotgun blast of rock salt which seriously wounded the horse.

In addition, it was brought out, Buehler had contemplated buying the hordse to race it in Florida this Winter, if its ability to make a quicker break from the starting gate were improved.

Peters was said to have been training the horse for Pending.

Saguaro was the target for pot-shots at the Laurel track last week, the commission was told today.

Jockey Don Fay testified he was shot in the leg while astride the thoroughbred in a workout last Thursday.

Buehler said he accidentally shot the horse at a starting gate last Friday.

Witnesses said the 6-year-old gelding took a rock-salt charge in the rump, bolted from the gate, crashed into the outside guard rail and broke his right foreleg.

The horse, whose owner was listed as George Perry, was then destroyed by Laurel guards.

Buehler said he intended to fire in the air while schooling the horse to break more rapidly.

"Suddenly the horse backlashed against the gate," Beuhler said, "and the gun went off."

Shot, Jockey Says

Jockey Fay testified he was shot in the leg while astride Saguaro the day before the horse was destroyed.

"Just after I left the gate," Fay said, "I felt my leg go numb, the horse wheeled and threw me off."

Fay said Buehler paid him $10 and Trainer Peters paid him another $50 "for my services as a jockey and for doctor's expenses."

The jockey did not say who had taken the potshot at the horse.

Raymond Whiting, a Laurel maintenance man, said he saw a man with a shotgun behind Saguaro the next day. "When the gates opened, he raised the gun and let him have it," Whiting said.

Saguaro once killed an exercise boy and had been banned from New York tracks for bad behavior, Buehler said.

Buehler, a St. Leonard, Md., contractor, said he is a licensed race horse owner. His only horse, Major Stone, broke its leg at Pimlico early this month, he said, and he does not now own a horse.

Found Horse Down

George M. Pielert, guard lieutenant at Laurel testified that he heard an explosion November 21 and found the horse Saguaro fallen beside the fence near the starting gate.

Pielert said he was attracted to the scene about 4:30 p. m. by a loud explosion.

"The horse had its leg completely snapped, and hanging by its skin," the guard testified.

"On its right hip there was an ugly wound, perfectly round and about three inches in diameter. It was four to five inches deep and looked like it had been scoopel out. It was a bloody mess."

Pielert said that Maurice (Moose) Peters, former jockey who was registered at Laurel as Saguaro's owner, was standing near the starting gate with a bridle and set of blinkers in his hand. The guard said he investigated the gate and found a wad from a shotgun near the inside track rail at the scene.

Shotgun Shell Found

Pielert said that George H. Martin, Laurel superintendent and general manager, also was at the scene investigating and found a discharged 12-gauge shotgun shell. The guard added, however, that he didn't see a gun.

Also at the gate, the witness said, were K. C. Burdett, identified as a groom employed by Peters, and several other persons Pielert said he could not identify.

As the hearing opened, Stuart S. Janney, jr., commission chairman, reminded witnesses that the proceedings were being conducted with full authority.

Janney said a written transcript would be taken and that if perjury was discovered in the testimony it could result in a 10-year prison term.

And Unbeaten Record

SMU Meets Texas Christian Today With Title at Stake

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 28 (AP).—Southern Methodist's Mustangs, their bowl future assured but needing one more victory to attain their second perfect season in history, meet Texas Christian here tomorrow in the last big shot to be fired in the Southwest Conference football race.

Unbeaten untied Penn State awaits the result with interest. The Nittany Lions have finished their schedule and tomorrow's battle winds up the season for their Cotton Bowl opponents.

The SMU-TCU game also will decide whether Southern Methodist is to be conference champion or have to share the title with Texas, a team which has finished the schedule with only one defeat —a 14-13 loss to Southern Methodist.

Standing room only will bring the crowd for the Methodist-Christian tussle to 30,000 or more as these teams renew a rivalry started back in 1915. The teams have played 29 games with Southern Methodist boasting an edge in victories of one—13 to 12. Four have been ties.

Texas Christian hasn't won from SMU since 1942 and isn't expected to do it this time. The Frogs have two regulars, Guard Alan Pike and Back Dave Bloxom, out with lime burns. SMU is in top condition.

Frog backers, however, pin some hopes on the fact that this game will be an anti-climax and that since the Mustangs already are in the Cotton Bowl they may play a "let-down game" against TCU.

The Frogs have been very tough at times and against some mutual opponents compare pretty favorably. TCU lost to Oklahoma A. and M., Texas, Rice and Arkansas, teams SMU defeated, but the Frogs beat Texas A. and M. by a bigger score than did the Methodist and licked Baylor about as convincingly as the Mustangs.

DEAR FOLKS: At Bowie.

Getaway day at old Bowie and the horses will be going a distance. Only one sprint is on the program with the route races ranging from 1 mile and 70 yards to the meeting's final at 1½ miles. Looks as if the horsemen are anxious to put over their horses. Every race drew a limit field of 12. The High Ground Stable's Hefty, winner of the Endurance Handicap, will winter at Red Bank, N. J., and will be pointed for the 3-year-old classics of next spring. I still believe Vashti will be the better performer at longer routes. Alan Clarke is shipping his Fritz Maisel to his Clarksville (Md.) farm and is undecided about plans for 1948. There's a new sport at the track—keeping away from the television. If you are supposed to be working, I'm told it's a good idea to stay in the back of the stands. The NBC outlet will televise the $20,000 Bryan and O'Hara, the valedictory feature. On to Charles Town Monday. See you on the rail.

What Am I Saying! — By Frank Morgan

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Klutz

Few U. S. Workers To Lose Jobs in New Budget Cut

Very few Federal workers will lose their jobs because of the 106,148 reduction in Federal employment ordered yesterday by Budget Director James E. Webb.

The majority of the layoffs ordered either have been made already or are planned.

Webb fixed 1,914,914 as the maximum number of Federal workers in the three-month period to begin January 1. This is a reduction of 106,148 from the maximum ceiling set by Webb for the current quarter that began on October 1.

But total Federal employment in this country on November 1 was estimated at 1,773,000, more than 100,000 under the new ceiling fixed by the Budget director. However, the budget ceiling also covers about 35,000 of the 257,000 Federal jobs overseas. But even so, present employment is safely under the new budget ceiling.

The new restrictions may cause a few agencies to lay off a minor number of employes. These will be offset by expansions in other agencies. Over-all, the new ceilings will have little effect.

In his statement, Director Webb carefully explained that actual employment usually runs well under established ceilings. His statement certainly holds true in this instance.

The Webb figure includes employes, for example, who haven't been hired. He cut the Postoffice personnel ceiling by 43,716, the largest so-called reduction. But nearly all of these 43,716 employes are yet to be hired for temporary duty to take care of the Christmas mail rush and they would be laid off after Christmas whether or not the Budget director fixed a lower personnel ceiling for the department.

Agriculture was given a reduction of 13,468 employes. These people are all seasonal employes. They work in the forests and on roads during the good weather, and all of them would have been laid off anyway. Interior also was ordered to lay off 5460 seasonal workers, a routine matter.

These are among the other reductions ordered:

Army, Navy, and Air Forces, a combined reduction of 19,266, most of which already has been made.

Maritime, 5661. This reduction was made in July and August.

War Assets, 4820. WAA this week ordered the layoff of more than 6000 employes as of December 31.

Veterans' Administration, 4758. This reduction became effective in October.

Reconstruction Finance, 836. RFC is steadily reducing its force and this ceiling won't change its plans. The same goes for General Accounting which was ordered to cut off 629 employes.

The Civil Service Commission was given an increase of 620 new employes to help it carry out the President's Federal worker loyalty program.

Budget Director Webb is required by law to fix personnel ceilings for each agency every three months. The Administration has asked Congress to repeal the law.

Tunnel Bid For Dupont Is Awarded

Main Driveway Under Circle Goes to Firm For $3,951,485

A contract for the construction of a main traffic tunnel for the Dupont Circle underpass at a cost of $3,951,485 was awarded yesterday to John McShain, Inc., Philadelphia contractor, the low bidder.

In making the award, the District Commissioners said the amount, could be reduced $200,000 by changes and substitutions.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, said the Commissioners could, by mutual agreement with the contractor, substitute local rock for the granite called for in the specifications and use terra cotta instead of cast iron pipe. These changes, plus a few other minor ones, would cut the total figure by $200,000, he explained.

General Young told reporters, "I feel we have a very good bargain."

Early this year, $3,800,000 was earmarked within Highway Department funds for the project. This amount was based on estimates made by the department last year. General Young said the difference between this figure and the contract figure was small considering material price jumps.

Work on the project is expected to begin early next spring and to reach completion about 1950. Four firms bid on the project.

Laying of a 3000-foot storm sewer needed to drain the underpass and utilities connections began earlier this year.

Wren completed, the project will place all Connecticut ave. automobile traffic in an auto tube running through the center of the park while streetcar traffic will be placed in a tunnel around the circle.

Padgett Appointed Fire Chief

The Washington Post

BERNARD J. PADGETT
Alexandria's Fire Chief

Bernard J. "Billy" Padgett, 41, who joined the department 25 years ago, yesterday was named chief of the Alexandria Fire Depirtment by City Manager Nicholas A. Colasanto.

The appointment, which becomes effective Monday, is the first made by Colasanto since he took office two weeks ago.

Padgett succeeds James M. Duncan, jr., who resigned August 1. Since then, William Barbour, Duncan's assistant chief, has acted as heid of the department. Colasanto would not comment on Barbour's status under the new set-up.

The new chief joined the department as a volunteer fireman in 1922 and served in that capacity until 1930. From then until 1942 he was a paid member of the force, acting as assistant chief operator of No. 4 Engine Company.

He reverted to volunteer status at the start of the war to become chief air raid warden for the city. Since the beginning of 1946, he has been Superintendent of Streets under the City Engineer, and has served as volunteer captain of No. 4 Engine Company.

Padgett has attended North Carolina State Fire College, United States Chemical Warfare School, and instructors' schools in both Virginia and Maryland.

As chief, he will receive an annual salary of $4560. He will administer a department of five fire companies, 41 paid firemen and a large volunteer force.

Trial Board Calls for Policeman's Dismissal

Unbecoming Conduct Admitted by Harris; Another Is Fined $75 on Two Charges

The police trial board yesterday recommended dismissal from the force for Pvt. Chester T. Harris of the Thirteenth Precinct after he had pleaded guilty to neglect of duty and conduct unbecoming an officer.

In a second case, Pvt. Harold W Beechner pleaded not guilty to charges of neglect of duty, failure to communicate with his precinct and failure to report off duty, all on November 3. He was found guilty and fined $50 and $25 on the first two charges and warned on the third charge.

Two other charges against Beechner, of willfully telling an untruth to a superior and conduct prejudicial to the order and discipline of the department, were dismissed.

Sergeant Testifies

In the Harris case, Sergt. Jack R. Milsted of the Thirteenth Precinct testified that Harris did not appear for roll call at 7:30 a. m. on November 11. He said the 34-year-old private arrived at the station at 3:30 a. m. and told him he had been drinking with a girl friend at 605 Rhode Island ave. nw.

Milste said Mrs. Harris had told him that her husband had not come home the previous night.

The sergeant showed the trial board a registration card from the boarding house at the Rhode Island ave. address, signed "Jake Harris" and "Ann Marris." Milsted said the signatures were in the private's handwriting.

Milsted said he was told at the boarding house that Harris and the girl had registered at 2:20 a. m. and remained together in a room until about 8 a. m.

Harris, a policeman since February, 1943, who lives at 842 19th st. ne., and has no children, had been fined twice before this year by the trial board. On January 7 he was fined $150 for neglect of duty. In February he was fined $75 for conduct unbecoming an officer. A charge of using unnecessary violence was dismissed.

Efficient, Kuehling Says

During the Beechner hearing, Capt. Benjamin C. Kuehling, a member of the trial board, voluntarily spoke on behalf of Beechner, describing him as "very efficient."

Beechner was assigned to Captain Kuehling's Fourth Precinct at the time of the violations, but has since been transferred to the Third Precinct.

Police witnesses testiged that Beechner deserted his traffic post at 12th st. and Maine ave. sw. on November 3, that he failed to make an hourly check with the precinct, and that although he was supposed to report off duty at 6 p. m. he did not do so until 7 p. m.

Beechner said he left his traffic post to answer a call at a restaurant to take care of a drunk. The drunk, he said, was gone when he arrived. Beechner, married and the father of five children, lives at 2244 Minnesota ave. se.

Policeman Again Charged With Sleeping on Duty

Pvt. Robert C. Redding, 45, of the Fifth precinct, who has been fined twice this month for sleeping on his beat and failing to report when on duty, was found sleeping again yesterday, according to his superiors.

Precinct Capt. Loraine T. Johnson said fellow officers discovered Redding asleep in a car parked at 15th and C sts. se., at about 6 a. m. yesterday. An investigation is in progress.

Redding was fined $115 by the trial board November 7 after admitting he did not report on two occasions, and failed to patrol his beat once. A week ago yesterday he was fined $25 for failing to ring in at 4 a. m. on November 4.

During his first hearing this month, Redding was described by his superior, Lieut. Bagby King, as a "first class policeman" with 24 years of service. King asked the board to consider Redding's wife and three small children.

Welfare Board Grants Relief In 9 Appeals

Four to Receive Assistance Held Part-Time Workers

The Board of Public Welfare yesterday granted relief to 9 of 22 persons who had appealed adverse decisions of case workers.

Of the nine who will receive relief, four were described as part-time employables.

A stringent rule of the board, made during last June's relief cuts, provided that no employable persons would be given relief. This rule was relaxed somewhat recently for certain part-time employables in the category of hardship cases, and yesterday's decisions were based on this revision.

Of the four part-time employables, one has just been released from a two-year treatment at a tuberculosis hospital, while another was working but needed money to pay for a nurse for her mother.

Of the 13 denied relief by yesterday's board action, three required special diets, while some of the others are employables who claimed they would not find work.

The board, which considered the appealed cases at a regular monthly meeting, also:

Approved the adoption of 27 children, preliminary to District Court hearings.

Granted requests for funds for operations on 25 children who are wards of the board or whose parents are on relief.

Authorized a study of the child day care program to eliminate overcrowding and waiting lists at the Southeast Day Care Center, while the Grant School Center has vacancies for more than 20.

Recommended that more youngsters be sent to foster homes to relieve conditions at Dunbar Cottage at the Children's Receiving Home.

Rep. Miller Favors Transfer Of Gallinger Mental Cases

Transfer of mental cases from Gallinger Hospital to St. Elizabeths Hospital should be given "serious thought," Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) declared yesterday in a report on District institutions.

Representative Miller, who is chairman of the District Subcommittee o nHealth, Education and Recreation, recommended the change to the District Commissioners unless "physical improvement and trained personnel can be provided" at Gallinger.

Last week Commissioner Guy Mason recommended transfer of the much criticized Gallinger psychopathic division to St. Elizabeths.

Congressman Miller, who is a physician, wrote to the Commissioners that his inspection revealed a need for additional trained attendants, physicians and improvement of equipment. He said that if such changes were made "medical schools should be interested in using it as a teaching institution."

The Congressman said that if the care of mentally ill is better and less costly at St. Elizabeths, a "changeover ought to be considered."

Dr. Alvin Sweeney, Gallinger superintendent, replied that the cost at either institution would be the same since many mental patients "are active and require much care." He agreed on the need for personnel and equipment, but denied a charge by Representative Miller that a painting program was needed.

Dr. Sweeney said painting of buildings is continuing steadily with first attention being given to those most in need.

In comments on other District institutions, Representative Miller said:

Receiving Home for Children—Needs kitchen, dining room, more personnel and equipment.

National Training School for Colored Girls—Praised Mrs. Rose Smith, superintendent, in a notation, "This institution is well managed." Plant not being used to its fullest capacity, however.

Industrial Home School—Two buildings are old and constitute fire hazards. They should be replaced.

Industrial Home School for Colored Boys—praised Wendell Tucker, superintendent, in noting the school was "the best conducted of all institutions" inspected, but needed a recreation director and new gymnasium.

Home for the Aged—Needs new kitchen and serving equipment. Land at Blue Plains could be utilized by District institutions for raising their own vegetables.

District Training School for the Feeble Minded—Needs addition to provide beds and adoption of security provisions to cut down on escapes. Additional trained personnel, particularly two physicians, are suggested.

Dr. Miller said he would meet with the Commissioners and Budget Officer Walter Fowler next week to discuss his recommendations.

Child's Train, Nest Egg of Woman, Stolen

Thievery Report Also Lists Church Money, Cigarettes

A woman's nest egg of $900, and a child's Christmas electric train were among thefts reported to District police yesterday.

The theft also included loss of $1000 worth of cigarettes and smoking tobacco, removed from a freight car on a siding at Sheriff rd. and Minnesota ave. ne. Lieut. E. E. Nicholson, B. & O. Railroad Co. policeman, said 15 cases of cigarettes and two cases of smoking tobacco were missing.

Miss Sally Nelson, 45, told police her savings of $900 were stolen from her apartment, 1921 Kalorama rd. nw. She had been saving to buy a home.

Church Fund Stolen

Some $58 which he was holding for the Nazareth Baptist Church building fund, as well as $62 of his own money and a $10 wrist watch were lifted from his basement apartment at 4309 1st st. se., Ernest Goggans, deacon, reported.

The child larceny victim was 3-year-old Michael Frederick Williams, 3, of 429 17th st. ne.

The electric train promised Michael by Santa Claus—two locomotives and a transformer which cost $72.50—were taken from a table near a broken window at the offices of the Bellevue Housing project, 213 Beyer rd. se., where Michael's Uncle Thomas F. Trussell is maintenance superintendent.

Santa Claus, Trussell reported, will make good.

A 17-jewel wrist watch valued at $120 was stolen from the Stage Coach tavern, 1306 Good Hope rd. se., Nathan Seigal, proprietor told police.

A gold ring set with a diamond, initialed "J. S.,"was reported by Julius Stokes as stolen from his bedroom at 1711 U st. ne.

Tires and Wheels Gone

Two tires, two tubes and two green wheels worth about $66 were stolen from a car parked by Albert R. Jackson of 405 60th st. ne., n a lot in the 700 block of M st. nw.

Nathan Meyer, of 1000 H st. ne., reported his store at the same address was rifled of four wrist watches, one clock, six lighters and two harmonicas, worth about $34, according to police.

Four suits, four overcoats, 10 sport shirts, gloves and shirts valued in all at $277 were stolen from a clothing store at 821 Market Space nw., Daniel Lowenstein, of 4509 46th st. nw., proprietor, reported, reported.

Bunn, of Pulaski, Va., from 15th st. and Constitution ave. nw.

Correction

The taxicab which struck an 8-year-old boy in the 1400 block of Florida ave. nw. on Wednesday afternoon was an American Cab, not a Yellow Cab, as stated originally in Thursday's issue of The Washington Post.

The boy, Wayne Green, of 1937 14th st. nw., was reported in good condition at Children's Hospital yesterday. The boy was injured while running from the south curb of the street.

The Washington Post regrets the error in identification.

Trial Board Amendments Considered

District Commissioners will consider amendments to existing regulations on Police and Fire trial boards to cover possible future hearings involving chiefs of the police and fire departments.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West disclosed yesterday that present statutes do not specifically provide for the convening of boards to consider charges brought against either official, although the commissioners are empowered to suspend them without such a hearing.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher is now preparing charges against Fire Chief Murphy as a result of a statement made on Captol Hill by Fire Marshal Daniel Conroy, one of the chief's subordinates, that the chief demoralized his department.

The charges are scheduled to be heard by a special three-man civilian trial board appointed by the Commissioners, at the request of Chief Murphy. The group has not yet been sworn in and the ceremony may be delayed until the present regulations are amended to specifically cover the establishment of such a board, District Building officials indicated.

The board was to be sworn in on Wednesday but the ceremony was delayed because of the illness of Inspector Clement Cox, chief clerk of the Police Department. Originally, G. M. Thornett, secretary of the Board of Commissioners, planned to swear in the board, but a check revealed that he was not empowered to do so.

Yesterday Inspector Cox returned to his duties, but said no plans have yet been made for the ceremony. Austin F. Canfield, board chairman, said he had not been informed of any definite date for the program, either.

West said provision for supertrial boards qualified to hear charges against a fire chief would require amendment of the fire manual by action of the Commissioners.

The establishment of a super police trial board bay require an act of Congress, West disclosed, since the present trial board is named under authority of a statute in the District Code passed by Congress.

25 Physicians Renamed As Coroners in Va.

The Virginia Commission on Post-Mortem Examinations, meeting in Richmond yesterday, reappointed 25 physicians as local coroners and made three new appointments.

The commission also approved a January-July budget of $29,893.20.

Among the coroners reappointed were Drs. W. C. Welburn, Arlington; Nelson Podolnick, Fairfax; James Wilkins, Lynchburg, and F. L. Byers, Rockingham and Harrisonburg.

3 Seek to Halt Transferring Of 2 Schools

Three students attending Browne Junior High School yesterday asked the Blow and Webb Elementary Schools from white to Negro use.

A petition for permanent injunction was filed by Attorney Leonard S. Hayes on behalf of the three children through their mothers and on behalf of "others similarly situated."

The transfer, along with that of three other schools, was approved November 19 by the Board of Education. Under a plan proposed by Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning the Blow and Webb Schools will be used as annexes to Browne, 24th st, and Benning rd. ne., to relieve overcrowding in that school.

To Be Vacated Monday

Dr. Carl Hansen, assistant superintendent in charge of white elementary schools, said yesterday that Blow and Webb Schools will be vacated on Monday.

The suit contends that the transfer "does not in fact accomplish its goal but rather creates new and greater problems."

Pupils using Blow at 19th and Benning rd. ne. and Webb at 15th and Rosedale sts. ne. will not be on fulltime programs "because of the loss of time involved in daily commuting a distance of 15 blocks between Webb and Browne and nine blocks between Blow and Browne," the suit said.

The plaintiffs charged that the eleemtnary buildings are without workshops, cafeterias, libraries and assembly halls and other junior high facilities and that the proposed transfer is to be made as of December 1 "in the midst" of the semester interrupting school work.

Closer Junior High

The suit declared that "there is a junior high school closer to Browne Junior High School than the elementary shools" and suggested that this school be used instead in the transfer. Hayes said that he referred to Eliot Junior High School, 24th and B sts. ne.

Named as plaintiffs are Betty Portal, represented by her mother, Mrs. Edith Portal, 4406 Eads st. ne.; Arthur Taplett, represented by Mrs. Barbara H. Taplett, 1232 Maryland ave. ne., and Charles David Nelson, represented by Mrs. Phoebe Nelson, 1928 Benning rd. ne.

Police arrested Miss Carrie Reid, 40, of 119 H st. sw. and charged her with assault with a dangerous weapon. The altercation occurred at the woman's residence, according to police.

William Hill, 19, of 27 A st. sw. was struck on the head with a bottle during an altercation in the 1300 block of Corcoran st. nw. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital and released.

Grover C. Statt, jr., 27, of 2111 15th st nw., was cut on the right hand and left side of the neck and right arm with a knife during an altercation in the 2000 block of Georgia ave. nw. He was treated at Freedmen's Hospital and released.

New Plan Asked On State Funds To Sanatoriums

Richmond, Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—The records of the State Board of Health for the 1945-46 fiscal year were approved today by State Auditor J. Gordon Bennett with the recommendation that a new formula be used for State payments to local tuberculosis sanatoriums.

Bennett recommended a new formula which would operate on the basis of the ratio of the Virginia resident patient days in each sanatorium to the total Virginia resident days in all of the participating sanatoriums. He also recommended that each local institution be required to comply with the provision requiring that 20 per cent of its beds be made available to the State if any State payments are to be made.

Dr. L. J. Roper, State health commissioner, said his department intends to put the Bennett formula into operation as rapidly as funds permit.

Mass Illness At Institution Under Study

About threescore youngsters at Industrial Home School became ill after their Thanksgiving dinner, but whether from food poisoning or overeating was not immediately determined.

John W. Tramburg, school superintendent, said it might be overeating, but just to make sure, he has sent samples of the food to the Health Department for analysis. This is expected to be available today.

Tramburg said the mass illness took place at about 9 p. m. Wednesday. The school celebrated its Thanksgiving a day early, since many of the residents were permitted to go home for the holiday.

None of the youngsters who became ill had to be put in sick bay at the home, and now all have fully recovered.

Tramburg reported that the same menu was served at the home on Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, and nobody got sick.

Authorities Checking Four Food Poisonings

District health authorities yesterday investigated a report that four of 13 persons who dined together Thanksgiving Day became ill following the feast.

Admitted to Casualty Hospital suffering from food poisoning were Margaret M. Gilbert, 28, and Mrs. Mary Jane Gilbert, 62. Treated were John L. Gilbert, 31, and his son, Francis, 7. All had dinner at 1:30 p. m. Thursday at 634 A st. se.

The four were taken to the hospital at 9 a. m. from the A st. address in Health Department and hospital ambulances.

2 Men Get 3 Years For Extortion, Impersonation

Baltimore, Nov. 28 (AP).—Two men who said they already had spent most of their lives behind prison bars were sentenced today to three years in the Maryland House of Correction on charges of impersonation of detectives and extortion.

Judge Joseph Sherbow imposed the sentences on Leo McConnell, 52, of Philadelphia, and Julius J. Pridgeon, 37, of Washington. They were arrested here in October.

Police testified McConnell and Pridgeon used an Anne Arundel County deputy sheriff's badge to pose as detectives. They said the pair "arrested" a man and obtained from him $40 in cash and a $400 check on a promise to drop alleged charges.

McConnell estimated he had spent one-third of his adult life in jail, while Pridgeon said he had spent practically all of it there.

Union Criticizes County Rent Unit

By The Associated Press

The Textile Workers' Union of America (CIO) aserted yesterday that Gov. William M. Tuck of Virginia ignored the meaning of the term "represetnative" in naming a rent control board for Pittsylvania County, Va.

John W. Edelman, Washington representative of the TWUA, in a letter to Acting Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods, said that none of the board members is "sufficiently in touch with the problems of the great majority of the people who are obliged to rent homes to be able to make a competent judgment on any matter affecting the welfare of this large group of citizens."

S. E. Atkinson Home Near Crewe, Va., Burned

Crewe, Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—The home of S. E. Atkinson, sr., of St. Marks Community near here, burned to the ground this morning and Atkinson suffered slight burns while he and neighbors saved a few household effects.

The Crewe Volunteer Fire Department responded but lack of water prevented saving anything but outbuildings.

Area News in Brief

Woman Says Rapillo Failed to Pay Debt

Former boxer Jeremiah Rapillo, police chief of Berlin, Md., yesterday successfully dodged one attack only to face another blow headed his way.

Report of an out-of-court restitution agreement cleared him of legal action on false pretense charges filed against him by Jesse Shumate, of 1101 South Carolina ave. se. Assistant United States Attorney J. Warren Wilson ordered the case nol-prossed after Shumate refused to prosecute or appear against Rapillo.

But, as the former "Patent Leather Kid" of New York boxing circles was leaving the hearing room, he was served with a summons to appear before the Municipal Court, civil division, to explain why he failed to repay a debt of $40.

The claim was filed by Mrs. Muriel M. Peay, of 715 Thayer st., Silver Spring, Md., who said that she and her husband loaned Rapillo the amount and were never paid back.

Rapillo came to Washington for a "vacation" last Saturday while a controversy raged in Berlin over his forceful law enforcement methods there as chief of police. News of his arrival here was followed by Shumate's charge that Rapillo accepted $150 for a sublease on store property he was not authorized to sublet.

Rapillo has said he'll return to police duties today.

At 1:10 a. m. yesterday, a lookout for a stolen auto from Pennsylvania police came over the teletype. It was similar to scores of lookouts which come over the wires daily and Gray promptly put it out over the air. Then he forgot about it, or did he?

At home in Poolesville, and off duty, 11 hours later, he saw Pennsylvania plate number 6BZ16 on a car and it rang a bell. A quick check with headquarters confirmed his suspicions and in less time than it takes to say "Photographic memory" the suspect was arrested.

"Yes, your honor," she replied.

"This is extremely embarrassing to have to impose sentence on a client I once tried to extricate," Judge Scott said, "I'd better certify the case to another judge."

At the request of John G. Saul, defense counsel, however, Judge Scott imposed sentence: Thirty days, to run concurrently with a year's sentence the woman is serving on a petty larceny charge.

Larger Firms Near 65% in Chest Drive

Almost two thirds of the Community Chest quota from the larger business firms in Washington has been raised, and the 4000 volunteer workers of Business Unit I are now "past the hump," according to Granville Gude, unit chairman.

Response to solicitation to 8000 members of the Washington Board of Trade by the Chest Tuesday has started, he said, and is helping bring in contributions from several firms which were slow in getting under way.

Quota for Business Unit I is $1,532,500, and yesterday, Gude said, his headquarters at 1435 K st. nw., had received contributions totaling $988,238 from some 2700 firms which employ a total of about 48,000 persons.

Thirty-five of the larger business firms in Washington have already raised 100 per cent of their individual quotas, and Gude added that he believes many more will be announced at the eighth report meeting Tuesday.

With four report meetings left before the campaign closes December 12, the Business Unit I volunteers have to bring in an average of $136,053 to make the quota.

In Memoriam

ELLISON, FREDERICK K. In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Frederick K. Ellison, who passed away one year ago today, November 29, 1946.
Our family circle is now broken
A voice we loved is stilled.
A place is vacant in our midst
Which never can be filled.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent the voice we loved to hear.
'Tis sad but true, we wonder why
The best are always the first to die.
We, who loved you, miss you sadly as there dawns another year;
In our lonely hours of misery
Thoughts of you are ever near.
'Tis sweet to know we shall meet again
Where parting is no more.
And that the one we loved so dearly
Has only gone before.
LOVING WIFE AND CHILDREN.

ROSENBERG, GOLDIE A. Who suddenly went to sleep two years ago. We thank God for the loveliest mother ever loaned to children.
HER CHILDREN.

Miss Alice Diggs Curtsies at Tea

By Marie McNair

Miss Alice Diggs, Washington's first debutante of the season, stepped out into a whirl of parties, including her own debut tea yesterday given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Diggs. A dinner party followed and another party in her honor is scheduled this evening.

The day began for her yesterday at the luncheon given for many of this year's debs by Mrs. Donald Wiley of Toledo, Ohio, the former Miss Margaret Crosson, who entertained at the Kennedy-Warren for her daughter, Margaret, a student at Georgetown Visitation Convent. Miss Crosson, tentatively on the list to be presented to society this season, has decided against a formal debut.

Bouquets which had been sent Miss Diggs on this all-important day blossomed from every corner at the Sulgrave Club yesterday.

The debutante, who is brown eyed and brown haired, was pretty as the proverbial pink in a gown of misty white tulle, the ankle-length bouffant skirt built over a hoop and trimmed with a trio of scalloped taffeta bands. A band of the same taffeta edged the dropped shoulder neckline. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of freesia and violets, centered with a single red rose.

Receiving with her daughter, Mrs. Diggs wore an aqua crepe gown with long skirt and square neckline bordered in matching sequins. A spray of tiny white orchids was pinned to her shoulder.

Roommate Assists

Assisting the debutante were her roommate at Bradford Junior College, Miss Sally Frost of Grosse Pointe, Mich.; Miss Mary Helen Harrison of Atlanta, Ga., a student at Mount Vernon Junior College, and Miss Callie Huger of Atlanta, who's studying at Wellesley. The three girls are staying with Mr. and Mrs. Diggs for the festivities. Miss Kathleen Rowe, in bouffant black velvet trimmed in white eyelet embroidery, was among those also asked to assist and others were Miss Helen Bowdoin, Miss Patricia Emery, Miss Phyllis Evans, Miss Ellen Owen, Miss Mary Rapley, Miss Mary Alexander, the Misses Amy and Helen Willard, Miss Mary Gertrude Durant and Miss Ellen Bacon.

Mrs. Clark Serves

Mrs. Tom Clark, wife of the Attorney General, was there, in a trim suit of black brocade with an off-the-face hat. She took her turn at the flower-decked tea table laid with a shimmering stardust silver cloth. Also serving tea and coffee were Mrs. Tom Connally, Mrs. George Street of New York and Mrs. L. D. McCleskey of Atlanta, Ga., both sisters of the hostess; Mrs. Ernest Draper, Mrs. Franklin Ellis, Mrs. Richardson Saunders, Mrs. Charles Cooper, Mrs. William Willard, Mrs. Dion Birney, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. Boykin Nielson, sister of the debutante; Miss Caroline McCleskey, her cousin; Mrs. Herbert Frost, Mrs. William Ragsdale, Mrs. Emil Hurja and Mrs. Paul Shorb.

I met George Boncesco on the way out and Senora de Caceres, wife of the Honduran Ambassador, waiting for her car. And inside, mobs of young people mingling happily with the older friends of the hosts. Saw Claire DeLattre-Seguy, a debutante this season; Judge Bennett Champ Clark and Mrs. Clark in a rust colored suit with bronze feathers on her hat. Mrs. Morris Cafritz, with swathes of pale blue veiling covering her white hat, was in a group which included Representative Albert Thomas, Drew Dudley and Mrs. Lee Murphy, whose black ostrich hat tipped with orange and a muff to match was definitely a "conversation piece."

Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie was chatting with Miss Suzanne Slingluff, who told us she had practically decided on January 22 as the date of her marriage to young Frank Holcomb. Mrs. Mitchell Palmer breezed in wearing her flame colored ostrich hat. I also saw, Mrs. Charles H. Maddox and her daughter, Evelyn, who made her debut last year; the Philippine Ambassador, Joaquin Elizalde, Senator Homer Ferguson and Presidential Assistant John Steelman with Mrs. Steelman, in her favorite black.

The Leslie Biffles were there and to name a few more at random—there were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Distler, Mrs. Curtis Shears, Mrs. Wade Haislip, wife of the general, Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mrs. Thomas Wadden and her daughter, Edwina; Dr. and Mrs. Matthew White Perry and Capt. and Mrs. Atherton Macondray.

Dinner Dance Follows

Just about the time the last guests were saying their adieux, Sidney and his orchestra were tuning up for the dinner dance which Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cooper gave at the Sulgrave Club for Miss Diggs, her assistants and a matching number of young men.

Joining the group for this party were Miss Grace Fletcher, Marshall Diggs, brother of the honor guest, who's home from Yale; William Poland, jr., Edward Sacks, David Semmes, Ralph Lee 3d, James R. Plitt, Scott Birney, James Birney, John Gill, Esten Norris, Brison Norris, jr., William McKenna, Hugh D. Auchincloss, jr., William McClure, Charles Townsend, David Toll and Caspar de Lange, who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Don Glassie from Holland.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper, at a nearby table, had as their guests the debutante's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dion Birney, who'll be hosts at dinner this evening at the Chevy Chase Club for Miss Diggs, and Mrs. Diggs' sisters, Mrs. McCleskey and Mrs. Street.

Your Questions On Homemaking

Will you give me a list of the chemicals used to soak pine cones and wood to make "magic fire"—that is, to make them burn in various colors? A. M. P.

You can make cones and logs burn in technicolor by treating them in advance with boric acid for green flames, copper sulphate (blue stone) for blue, and strontium nitrate for red. Mix a pound of the desired chemical in one gallon of water, soak the wood or cones in the solution for several hours, then give them several more hours to dry before burning them.

I used an oil paint on the background of a small plastic glass sign for an organization. The whole thing was a mistake, and now I would like to clean off the paint from the surface and put new lettering on it. Someone advised me that it couldn't be done without harming the plastic. Can you help me out with a remedy? F. M. W.

It shouldn't hurt the plastic to soften the paint by applying either commercial paint remover or turpentine and letting it remain for a while. Then wipe off with a cloth dampened with fresh remover or turpentine. If remover is used, neutralize afterward by wiping with denatured alcohol or turpentine.

Heaven preserve me
From obstinate plumbing!

Don't bank on luck, Petunia! And DON'T let grease, coffee grounds, and other waste materials wash down the sink drain.

Bishop-Bracken

Can you tell me how many calories there are in a 10-ounce glass of unsweetened prune juice? The juice is extremely sweet, though labeled "unsweetened." A. C.

About 225 calories.

Will you tell me what I can put on brass andirons to keep them from tarnishing? They are in a fireplace which is never used, so after I polish them, I would like to put on something to protect their appearance. R. C.

Clear lacquer (metal lacquer, if you can find it) is the thing to use to protect the andirons. After removing all tarnish, wash the andirons in hot soapy water. Then rinse thoroughly in clear, hot, running water, avoiding excessive handling. Dry thoroughly; then apply denatured alcohol to the entire surface and let that dry. Next, apply the lacquer with a paint brush to the entire surface. Later, if the lacquer finish dulls with time, remove it with denatured alcohol and apply a fresh coat.

Can you tell me how I can clean and brighten an old oil painting? A. H. B.

Trying to clean oil paintings at home is a risky business. If the painting is valuable, it would be far wiser to take it to a professional for cleaning. However, if you don't mind taking a chance with it, wipe it off gently with a small amount of linseed oil and a piece of cheesecloth. Or apply petroleum jelly sparingly to the painting with a soft cloth.

A recent rainy day has proven to me that I need help in finding activities for my two boys—8 and 4—while they must be inside. We have a basement which is good for a workshop. Can you direct me to some source that will provide me with suggestions, patterns, and so forth—things that will be interesting and instructive for my boys to make. Also, may I add that I will be able to supervise to a certain extent, but not 100% as I have work which I must do as well. So there must be something they can do with occasional help from me. D. L. B.

You are a wise mother to realize that your boys need help in finding construction activity. By guiding them now, you can well start them along lines of interesting hobbies which they will enjoy their entire lives. Also, a busy child is usually a good child. The workshop is a grand idea. Provide each boy with a sturdy table which will not be affected by hammering, aeroplane glue, and such. Be sure to saw off the legs to the right height. The tools can be simple to start, a hammer, small and nails. Many mill work shops will give you all of the small pieces left over from their mill work which you care to pick and carry away. Provide the boys with a basket of these pieces—all sizes and shapes and the above simple equipment and we will wager you will not have to worry much about patterns and what to make. The younger one will follow the lead of the older one. Be sure to arrange a place to keep the tools and insist they are kept in place from the start. When they have several things made, let them paint them. Here is where 100 per cent supervision is necessary, at least at first. As fascinated as they will be with the woodwork, the time will come when they want a different activity. Here's one that uses home materials and will keep several interested. Without the children knowing it, save your empty food cartons, cans (open from bottoms, leaving the label clean) and such. Some afternoon, when you have a goodly amount collected and the children want new activity, give them the lot. Before you know it, they will have set up store and be doing business. You can buy sale books at the dime store as well as paper money. The children are clerks and the younger ones the shoppers.

Strombecker plane and boat models are fine for 8-year-olds. They are inexpensive and come complete, that is, no cutting or shaping of parts, all you do is to glue them together. Boys love collections of these. When you buy them (the toy department of department stores, dime stores, variety stores carry them) ask for the simpler ones first. Your 4-year-old will be content to watch older brother do his, especially if brother makes one for him. They can advance from these models to more complicated ones if they have interests along these lines. For other "what to do" ideas, drop into a book store and ask to see the books on this subject. There are many and varied books to be had. "A Boy's Treasury of Things to Do" by Caroline Horowitz, published by Hart Co., is a good one. This comes in ages 6-9 and 9-12; both might be helpful to you. Also, "Junior Fun in Bed" by Kirkus & Scully, published by Simon & Schuster, was written for invalid children, but would be equally good for children indoors.

I would like to refinish an old maple chair, using the oil and turpentine method. The chair has numerous nail holes. What would be the most satisfactory material to fill the holes and show the least in the light finish? P. V. H.

Apply stick shellac with a heated tool (such as a cheap screwdriver). After preparation has dried, rub with very fine sandpaper with the grain of the wood.

Best Foot Forward for Holidays

By Peggy Preston

PRETTIEST dress-up shoes we've had in years are being offered now for holiday wear.

For the first time in many years you can take your pick from collections of gold and silver leathers, glistening satin, twinkling sequin trim and rich brocades. You'll find dark suedes, edged with gold, excellent for either afternoon or evening wear. There is also an abundance of gold or silver leather combined with black satin, the perfect complement to dinner gowns.

Biggest single fashion item in the new evening shoes is the ankle strap. They are being used in every conceivable design, ranging from double bands to wide piece of leather and fabric cut with intricate designs. These really "do something" for your underpins and are meant for slit skirts and short dinner dresses.

Bareness interpreted with finesse is present in many modes. In addition to the open toes and open backs, some nifty styles have little more than narrow bindings artistically placed hither and yon over instep and ankle.

Women with discriminating tastes are welcoming the return of the long, slender opera pump, with closed toe and heel, with no form of trimming. These styles claim attention by virtue of their simplicity and line rather than by any exaggerated fashion points. Slippers such as these are being made in plain black or white satin.

HEELS ARE both low and high. For the teenagers and other young folk who like their comfort there are dozens of types of low-heeled dancing shoes. Some of the cutest are Grecian-inspired, with hand-woven straps winding over the foot.

Platform soles continue popular with variations in design. Nearly all are ½ inch in height, but those who prefer to be higher up will find striking styles with ¾ inch platforms. These are for little girls and also for those who say they like the cushiony feel of a platform for dancing.

Miss Shearer, who measures a mere 5 feet in height, likes the type shoe she models here for semiformal wear. Made of black suede, it has a half-inch sole and ankle strap. Cut-out design over the instep and toe is edged with gold leather, making the shoe suitable for afternoon or evening events. Available at Hahn's shoe stores.

THIS graceful bracelet sandal spells evening elegance to the tip of its long, slender, closed toe. Pictured here in black satin, it is also available in white satin; silver or gold leather; black, brown or green suede. At J. & J. Slater's

GAY and frivolous, these little gold slippers are the delight of the Junior Miss, who insists on comfort, plus style. Known as "flats," they are hand laced and come in a variety of strap combinations, three of which are shown here. Soles are covered, top and bottom, with unfinished natural colored leather. At I. Miller's

Plot's Afoot to Show Men's New Look

Hear ye! Hear ye!

There's a plot afoot (in feminine circles) to prove that men, too, are guilty of a "New Look."

Guilding lights behind this infamous plan are members of the League of Republican Women who are holding a luncheon-fashion show December 4 in the Grand Ballroom at the Mayflower Hotel. Main feature on the program is, naturally, a parade of feminine fashion. Hattie Carnegie is sending her midwinter collection to Washington for the event (and a bevy of models as well).

But before the curtain rises on the Carnegie show, the girls will present a sketch entitled "The New Look for Men."

They're pretty secretive about what types of costumes are going to be shown. "It's a fashion show and yet it isn't a fashion show," is how one committee member explains it. But they have anounced the list of those who will model. Included are Representative Lowell Stockman, Douglas Hatch, W. R. Massey, A. Burks Summers, Warren Stephenson, Jack Fulton and Irving Bridges, jr.

How to help a boy become a man

Many American leaders attribute their adult success to the lessons they learned as carrier boys for some newspaper.

They learned that success depends on service: American customers expect to get what they pay for.

They learned that 75% may be a passing grade in school but one missed paper on a route of 100 subscribers means an annoyed customer and very likely a complaint to the office.

They learned that a contract must be kept—when the customer agrees to take the paper the boy agrees to deliver it every day, and neither weather, sleepiness, nor any other excuse should interrupt that contracted service.

They learned how to talk to people—how to speak up with self-assurance when seeking new customers, how to handle non-payers politely but firmly, how to think fast and talk to the point when trying to make a sale.

They learned self-reliance, to stand on their own two feet and not be eternally dependent on parents for pocket money or even for clothes and college funds.

They learned, in short, to grow up as men in the proud American tradition of self-discipline and self-reliance.

It's a good way to grow up.

D. C. Sewage Disposal Plan Is Protested

District officials yesterday were asked to explain the District sewage sludge disposal program, following complaints of Fairfax County residents that dumping at Lorton Penitentiary is polluting Virginia streams.

The order, entered by the Virginia State Water Control Board, found District sanitation engineers sympathetic, but stymied until 1952 in plans to "materially" aid present conditions.

Representatives of Alexandria and Arlington County, in separate order, were also summoned to appear before the board in Richmond, December 17, to discuss stream pollutions in their areas.

Protest From Fairfax

The order against the District stemmed from protest by 22 Fairfax County residents that the Lorton sludge piles were draining into Pohick Creek, polluting it so badly as to make it unfit for either drinking or recreation purposes.

Harold Kemp, District director of sanitary engineering, explained last night that the District has been shipping its sewage sludge to Lorton since beginning of operations of the sewage processing plant, at Blue Plains, in 1938. Originally, he said, it was spread out as fertilizer, but the supply soon exceeded demand.

Since then, he said, the sludge has been dumped there in a natural ravine, blocked off from the creek by two settling dams. One dam has filled with the sludge and the second is filling, he said. He said he would attend the December 17 meeting.

Bad Condition Admitted

Admitting the dumping has caused "an unsanitary condition we are trying to correct," Kemp said present plans call for completion of an incinerating plant at Blue Plains by 1952. This $700,000 project, he said, would removed water from the sludge and permit its sale as dry fertilizer.

The present sludge, he said, is two thirds water and costs the District $40,000 a year to freight it to the Lorton grounds.

The board disclosed that its complaints against stream pollution in the Alexandria-Arlington County area came from both the Washington National Airport and the Arlington Chapter of the Izaak Walton League. Both protested pollution of Four Mile Run.

U. D. C. Chapter to Meet

The Robert E. Lee Chapter No. 644, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will meet at 8 p. m. Monday at Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont ave.

Lane Names Tuck To ConferencePost

Richmond, Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—Governor Tuck has been appointed to the educational committee of the Southern Governors Conference, his office announced today.

The appointment was made by Maryland's Gov. Preston Lane, chairman of the Southern group. Governor Tuck will serve on the committee with Govs. Millard F. Caldwell of Florida, M. E. Thompson of Georgia, Jim Nance McCord of Tennessee and Ben T. Lacey of Arkansas.

The committee's principal assignment is an investigation of the need for additional regional schools for both white and Negro students, where specialized instruction at the college level can be obtained.

THE DISTRICT LINE

By Bill Gold

Damsel in Distress Rescued by Modern Knights

Mrs. William Pollock of 1425 Montana ave. ne. reports this drama from real life:

The girl seated herself at the lunch counter of the Brentwood Drug Store at 14th st. and Rhode Island ave. ne., and ordered coffee.

But before it could be served to her, she toppled from her seat in a dead faint. Employes and patrons rushed to her aid.

A doctor who happened to be in the store revived her; the manager got her story.

She'd come here from the West, looking for work. But she hadn't found any, and she was broke, hungry, and friendless.

Within a few minutes the doctor had given her some pills, the manager had served her a whopping meal, and an executive of a chain grocery store had given her a job.

All of which just goes to illustrate why this column always contends that people are nicer than anybody.

"WHAT'S IN A NAME?"

Louise Royall of 1628 Columbia rd. nw. says that my recent list of West Virginia towns omitted her favorite place, Erbacon.

And she explains how this little community got its unusual name.

It seems that a railroad was being pushed through that part of the State, and the construction gang ate at a certain boarding house. The landlady would always ask her patrons:

"Ya want eggs erbacon?"

This became such a by-word that when the settlement became large enough for naming, it was called Erbacon.

REBUTTAL

Although our kitten controversy is now ended, the lady who suggested euthanasia for unwanted pets is certainly entitled to explain her position.

"I wish that your readers would not think of me as somebody who wants to put little kittens to sleep because I don't care for them," writes Mrs. Gertrude Brown of 2651 16th st. nw.

"Everybody who knows me, knows that's not true. I am an animal lover and, as such, I hate to see animals suffer.

"I take care of strays, and have found many which have been run over, eyes torn out, limbs broken, starved — just barely alive.

"Whenever possible, I find good homes for these strays. But when it's not possible, I believe that my method is the only one which will prevent this suffering."

Mrs. Brown, I salute you. You've succeeded in shutting up a columnist—which is no mean feat.

LUNCH, BUNCH, BRUNCH

John T. Cheney of 4989 Newport ave. nw. reports that one of our Safeway stores has this sign posted on its refrigerator:

"Please do not break the eggs. If you want less than a dozen, the checker will break them for you."

MISCELLANY

Frieda G. Boyce of 2151 California st. nw. wonders whether I know that the first local cat show in many years will be held in January. Or that I've just been voted an honorary member of the Capital City Cocker Club (which should provide me with a convenient dog house whenever the occasion arises) . . . The St. Paul's Players will be host tonight to anybody who can prove that his name is Earnest. All others will have to pay the usual 75-cent admission fee to see "The Importance of Being Earnest" (at St. Paul's Auditorium, 1421 V st. nw., 8:30 p. m.) . . . Streetcar tokens and cash for Children's Hospital have been received from Victor Showers, 817 S. Pitt st., Alexandria, Va.; Mary V. Robinson, 2032 Belmont rd.; and the Georgetown Presbyterian Church, 3115 P st. nw. . . . D. E. Harpold of Brandywine, Md., tells me that his square-dancing group is vainly searching for a recording of "Bear Creek Hop" . . . The ladies of the Pinkney Memorial Episcopal Church of Hyattsville, Md., will hold a Christmas Bazaar on the night of December 5. In addition to baby gifts, needlework, and ceramic objects, they'll sell cakes, pies, candies, cookies, homemade jelly, and enough similar items to make me hungry just writing about them.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Wonder what ever happened to all those fine resolutions I made last New Year's Day? It's almost time for a fresh batch, but the old ones are practically as good as new.

LECTURE ON "PALMISTREE"

"What are you trying to palm off on your readers?" asks Tom Blevins of 1308 Park rd. nw.

"Your correspondent said that there are 29 palms at 29 Palms, Calif. But that's no correct.

"There are either 11 or about 150. Take your choice.

"Originally, there were 29; but about 35 years ago newcomers to the community started planting new trees—while the old trees began to disappear for various reasons. And today there are about 150 palms there, but only 11 of the original trees remain.

"So the palm census is either 11 or approximately 150—depending on whether you mean the original palms or all of them."

THE REAL THREAT

I do not fear the wolf at the door;
No threat to my wallet he.
But fear I do the mink at the store
That wifey has chanced to see.
Jay Aitch

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Herbert Saunders, principal of the Occoquan District High School in Occoquan, Va., forwards without comment the following item from the Manassas (Va.) Messenger:

"Mrs. Rosamond Hanson, editor of the Manassas Messenger, suffered slight injuries when an automobile collided into her rear end Sunday."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK—A few days before the royal wedding the servants in Buckingham Palace gave a party in honor of the approaching event. The King and Queen, the princesses and Mountbatten were invited to this staff ball, whose customary climax is the dancing of a Scotch reel. The only member of the royal party who danced it properly was Philip Mountbatten.

Three days earlier a palace footman, who once served on the same ship with the groom-to-be, stopped him in a corridor and said, "Lieutenant, you won't look smart to your young lady if you do not dance the Scotch reel." The footman then gave him three days' lessons.

S. Hurok, the impresario, is arranging for Britain's foremost ballerina, Alicia Markova, to return in a tour there this spring. Anton Dolin will appear with her.

Whenever the royal family of Britain hears an orchestra playing "God Save the King," Princess Margaret Rose nudges her father and whispers. "There is your theme song."

Salute will publish Joe Louis' article, "My Toughest Fight." It was written on assignment from another magazine, which then rejected it because Louis wrote about his fight against prejudice and revealed that while he was on an exhibition tour for the Army he was arrested in a Georgia railroad station for using a telephone on the white side of the depot.

At the Harem night club Myron Cohen told of a man who applied for a job in a factory, was taken to a machine and was shown its intricate operation. "I've never worked at a machine before, but I'll try it," said the man . . . "How much salary do you want?" the employer asked him . . . $200 a week," said the applicant . . . "$200 a week is outrageous," said the employer. "How can you ask that much when you don't know anything about the machine?" . . . That's just why," said the man, "because for me it's so hard."

At the testimonial dinner to Gian Carlo Menotti, Douglas Moore, head of Columbia University's music department, was introduced as the Yale man who had written the football song, "Good Night, Harvard." Moore confided that he wrote it as a jeering song but that unfortunately during his four years at Yale, Harvard won every football game.

The Hartmans will include a satire on Jack Cole's dancing in their "Angel In the Wings" show. Cole himself is rehearsing them in the satire.

Seventeen years ago Carmen Lombardo wrote the music and Gus Kahn the lyrics for the hit song, "Coquette." Last week Lombardo wrote the lyrics and Kahn's widow, Grace, wrote the music for a new song, "Am I Falling in Love With You?"

'Friend' Ships Start for Europe

By Drew Pearson

Philadelphia.—Today the last section of the Friendship Train pulls into Philadelphia, 202 cars strong. Started in the Southwest because the folks down there didn't want to be left out when it came to friendship, this section of the train was sparkplugged by the Wichita Eagle, carried by the Santa Fe, Chesapeake & Ohio, and Baltimore & Ohio railroads, and loaded by just about everyone.

Tomorrow, the American Leader, a ship patriotically allocated by the United States Lines for purposes of friendship, will sail from Philadelphia carrying part of this carefully collected cargo, via New York, to France.

Later the SS Exiria, also contributing cargo space to the cause of friendship, will sail from New York with part of the cargo for Italy. A few days afterward two other American steamship lines, the Waterman and the States Marine Corp., are generously helping to clean up the final cargoes in their SS Alewai and the SS Hoosier City. All this is being done by the steamship lines, as by the railroads and everyone else connected with the Friendship Train, absolutely free of charge.

The French cargo should arrive before Christmas. Because of the longer trip through the Mediterranean, the Italian cargoes will arrive a little after Christmas, but in time for the Italian gift-giving day; for the Italian people exchange gifts not only at Christmas time as in the United States but on the feast of Epiphany, January 6.

Translating the Story

Meanwhile, many generous American communities not on the main line of the Friendship Train have been rushing voluntary contributions to the boat. The City of Nashville, Tenn., entirely unsolicited, loaded up 100,000 pounds of flour and trucked it all the way to Philadelphia. Chattanooga did the same thing with two huge truckloads of evaporated milk.

And up in New England, not to be left out when it comes to generosity, Manchester, New Hampshire's Radio Station WFEA sparked the loading of two boxcars now being rushed to New York, while Bridgeport, Conn., is feverishly loading a small train of its own in order to reach New York before the "friendships" sail.

To some extent the most difficult part of the Friendship Train has just begun—namely, to make the people of Europe understand how all sorts of Americans poured out their good will to fill the Friendship Train.

The story is already being told to Europe in part by newsreels, radio and newspaper stories; and it will be told further when the food arrives. But no medium can really tell this story of spontaneous American generosity.

When this columnist first suggested the idea of a train starting from Los Angeles with one boxcar to load food on the way, I must now confess that I was worried sick for fear we would not start with a single car. My humble apologies go to the people of Los Angeles and everyone else for grossly underestimating American generosity!

U. S. and French RR Men

And if the French railroad men realize—and we shall most certainly tell them—that their brethren on the Santa Fe, the Union Pacific, the New York Central and several other roads—gave up their salaries to haul this train; and that the Pennsylvania Railroad men contributed not only one large car of flour, but $10,000 in cash besides—well, it ought to help a little toward the brotherhood of man.

It is the story of all sorts of people.

The prisoners at Yadkinville, N. C., Prison Camp 810 sent a check for $32 with the message, "It's a token of our feelings for our fellow men."

The businessmen of the Toledo Junior Chamber of Commerce loaded 9 tons of milk.

The American Legion, the DAR, Boy Scouts, schools and John Q. Citizens of Welch, W. Va., heard about the Friendship Train and, on two days' notice shipped one full boxcar of canned milk from that tiny mountain community.

The students of Virginia Intermount College voted to give up their Thanksgiving banquet, contributing the money to the Friendship Train, while the churches—all denominations—chipped in, together with the radio stations and the newspapers, until that mountain area not only loaded two cars of canned milk, but started a small train northward.

Raleigh and Durham, N. C., sent their cars, while the Lions Club in Morehead City, N. C., got together with the Lions Club of Kinston, N. C., both small towns, and shot their own car up to join the main Friendship Train.

Ned Chilton, editor of the Charleston (W. Va.) Gazette raised so many cars of food that the second section of the train just had to go there.

A lot of people never got into the limelight when it came to the Friendship Train, never wanted to get in the limelight. They just joined quietly in making up The Train of American generosity, of American action, of America at its best.

Right to Complain

Indeed I do not like the one . . . Who constantly complains . . . Because some little thing goes wrong . . . Or just because it rains . . . Who frets from morning until night . . . And bothers everyone . . . As though it were impossible . . . To find a little fun . . . But I am just as glad at times . . . That there is no restraint . . . And that I have an equal right . . . To register complaint . . . That I may speak whatever words . . . I have a mind to say . . . And nobody may ever take . . . That liberty away . . . I may be prejudiced or I . . . May have a feeble brain . . . But I am thankful that I have . . . The privilege to complain.
